JOINT FORCE QUARTERLY

JFQ

Reforming Joint Doctrine

Coalition Warfare

Joint Warfare—Views from the Top

United Nations Peacekeeping

The Limits of Jointness

The Gulf War Revisited

Joint Air Operations

Service Redundancy—Waste or Capability?

Summer 93

Inaugural Issue

A PROFESSIONAL MILITARY JOURNAL

Warfare today is a thing of swift movement—of rapid concentrations. It requires the building up of enormous fire power against successive objectives with breathtaking speed. It is not a game for the unimaginative plodder.

. . . the truly great leader overcomes all difficulties, and campaigns and battles are nothing but a long series of difficulties to be overcome.

— General George C. Marshall
Fort Benning, Georgia
September 18, 1941

Inaugural Issue

JFQ

JFQ

JOINT FORCE QUARTERLY

Published by the Institute for National Strategic Studies
National Defense University
Washington, D.C.