Biderman, A. D. Communist attempts to elicit false confessions from Air Force prisoners of war. Bull. N.Y. Acad. Med., 1957, 33, 616-625.

A distinction between "eliciting compliance" and "shaping compliance" is used in this analysis of interviews with POW survivors.

Biderman, A. D. Communist techniques of coercive interrogation. Lackland Air Force Base, Tex.: Air Force Personnel & Training Research Center, Dec., 1956. AFPTRC Development Report TN-56-132.

An analysis of coercive tactics and their psychological effects. Seeks basis for improved survival training.

Biderman, A. D. Effects of Communist indoctrination attempts: Some comments based on an Air Force prisoner-of-war study. Soc. Probs., 1959, 6, 304-313.

Suggests that a general "anti-ideological" attitude may account for the high resistance of American prisoners in Korea to Communist indoctrination attempts.

Biderman, A. D. March to calumny: The story of American POWs in the Korean War. New York: Macmillan, 1963.

A book to fill the gaps in reporting of the POW episode by social scientists. Challenges some common misinformation and misinterpretation.

Hacker, A. Dostoevsky's disciples: Man and sheep in political theory. J. Politics, 1955, 18, 590-613.

A comparison of Dostoevsky's "The legend of the Grand Inquisitor," Huxley's Brave new world, and Skinner's Walden Two as portrayed of societies with complete disregard for the autonomy of the individual and societies which use mass conditioning to achieve their ends. A comment on the influence of these models on society.

Haring, J. Preface to special issue on "brainwashing." J. Soc. Issues, 1957, 13 (3), 1-2.

Points to fundamental question posed for psychology by accounts of the collaboration elicited by Communists from their prisoners.

Henderson, B. A. Communist indoctrination methods. Mil. Rev., 1955, 35, (8), 27-38.

Discussion of "brainwashing" techniques and social background of converts to Communism through brainwashing.

Hinkle, L. E., Jr. In Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry. Methods of forceful indoctrination: Observations and Interviews. New York: GAP Publications Office, July, 1957, GAP Symposium No. 4. Pp. 285-292.

Briefer papers of longer study.

Holmes, N. D. The degree of objectivity in chart interpretation. In V. A. Leonard (Ed.) Academy Lectures on Lie Detection Vol. II. Springfield, Ill.: Charles C Thomas, 1958. Pp. 71-83.

Holt, R. R. "Brainwashing" and its implications for mental health. New York Univ., Res. Cent. for Ment. Health, unpublished.

Rejects thesis that "brainwashing" makes use of technique of conditioned reflex. "Brainwashing" seeks to reduce an adult to a child and to confuse the individual's sense of reality.

Holzappel, W. Erfahrungen aus sowjet gefangenschaft, Deutsches Pfarrerblatt, Essen: 1956, 25, 35-39.

Horia, Vintila. Spanische Russlandheimkehrer, Zeitschrift fur Geopolitik, March 1955.

Horowitz, M. W. The psychology of confession. J. crim. Law, Criminol. and police Sci., 1956, 47, 197-204.

Discussion of psychological situation of persons who voluntarily confess to acts which they committed.

Human Organization Editorial. "Brainwashing" and reliability. Hum. Organ., 1955, 13 (4), 4.

Urges the need for objective criteria by which to measure methods of studying social phenomena. Without these criteria, the "facts" of social phenomena can be made to fit theories of what should be rather than what actually exists.

Human Organization Editorial. "Brainwashing" and the teaching process. Hum.Organ., 1955, 13 (4), 3-4.

Discussion of the similarity between "brainwashing" and the relationship of case supervisor to student, urging that more empiricism be used in the behavioral sciences.

Hunter, E. Brainwashing in Red China. New York: Vanguard, 1953.

General description of thought reform by a journalist basing his account on the stories of Chinese defecting from the mainland after the take-over: a book that first gave currency in the U. S. to the term "brainwashing."

Hunter, E. Brainwashing; the story of men who defied it. New York: Farrar, Strauss & Cudahy, 1956.

Analysis by a journalist of POWs and others who stated that they had been able to resist "brainwashing."

Hunter, E. The story of Mary Liu. New York: Farrar, Strauss, & Cudahy, 1957.

The chronicle, by a journalist, of the "brainwashing" processes used on an editor or a missionary magazine in the early 1950's.

Huxley, A. Brave new world revisited. New York: Harper's, 1958.

A chapter on "brainwashing" in this general discussion of "threats to freedom" regards it as based on Pavlovian and other physiological experimentation.

Huxley, A. Drugs that shape men's minds. In R. Thruelson & J. Kobler (Eds.), Adventures of the mind. New York: Knopf, 1959.

Social fascination with drugs is compared with religious transcendentalism. A whole society dulling unpleasantness would be fair game for totalitarianism.

India-China Border Dispute. USIA Documents File. New York Times Nov. 18, 1959; Dec. 15, 1959, April 3, 1963. Washington Post Dec. 21, 1962.

Outlines Indian protests of Chinese handling of about 3,300 prisoners. They report continuous interrogations, confinement in cold, damp, holes in the ground, and pressure to sign statements and pose for pictures.

Israeli Treatment of Egyptian prisoners in war of 1956. New York Times Jan. 28, 1957. Jan 25, 1957; Dec. 17 & 19, 1956; Nov. 19, 1956; July 21, 1956.

Hundreds of Egyptian officers and nco's sent on tours of Israel accompanied by guards and civilian volunteers.

Kinhead, E. Have we let our sons down? McCall's, 1959, 49, 23-81.

Weaknesses in American institutions that may have caused misconduct of Americans in Korean captivity.

Kinhead, E. In every war but one. New York: Norton, 1959.

Thesis is that compliance of U. S. prisoners of the Communists in Korea is traceable to defects in American civilian and military institutions, rather than effects of "brainwashing."

Kinhead, E. A reporter at large: The study of something new in history. The New Yorker, 1957, 25, 102-153.

An earlier version of book.

Kinne, D. G. The wooden boxes. London: Frederick Muller, 1955.

An autobiographical account by a British "other rank" as a POW in Korea.

Kubis, J. Experimental and statistical factors in the diagnosis of consciously suppressed affective experience. J. Clin. Psychol., January 1950, 6 (1), 12-16.

Concludes that "work in lie detection demonstrates the possibility of maximizing the objectification of our clinical intuitions through the rigorous application of experimental controls. . . if the instrument or technique is not forced to give a multi-dimensional clinical decision in vague multi-dimensional language."

Kubis, J. Instrumental, chemical, and psychological aids in the interrogation of witnesses. J. Soc. Issues, 1957, 13 (2), 40-49.

Discusses uses of lie detectors, "truth drugs," and hypnosis in evaluation of questionable testimony. Emphasizes testimony of witnesses who have no conscious intent to lie.

Kubis, J. Lie detection: Recent developments and persistent problems. Transactions of the New York Academy of Sciences, November, 1953, 16 (1), 34-38.

Emphasizes the judgment of the operator in interpreting lie detector machine results.

Kubis, J. Studies in lie detection, computer feasibility considerations. Fordham University AF-30(602)2270 Project #5534. Rome Air Devel. Center Air Force Systems Command USAF, Griffiss Air Force Base, New York.

Describes experimental work.

Lamott, K. Memoirs of a brainwasher. Harpers Magazine, 1956, 212, 73-76.

A former American military intelligence interrogator describes thorough compliance of Japanese POWs with American captors.

Levy, S. S. Hypnosis and the legal immutability. J. crim. Law Criminol., 1955, 46, 333-346.

Describes murder cases in which the courts would not accept confessions nor favorable evidence presumably obtained by hypnosis.

Leviere, A. H. For the brainwashed: Pity or punishment. New York Times Magazine, Aug. 14, 1955, 12+.

A discussion of the post-Korean War controversy on POW policy.

Describes procedure used to investigate conduct of repatriated American soldiers.

Prugh, G. S., Jr. Prisoners at war: The POW battleground. Dickenson law Rev., 1956, 60, 123-138.

Discusses changes in doctrine regarding status of POWs through history and questions wisdom of abandoning "quarantine" doctrine for one which obligates the POW to remain "at war."

Prugh, G. S., Jr. Some legal problems regarding POWs and the Code undated mimeographed, 3 pp.

Concludes that the U. S. Military Code references to conduct in POW status are directory, not mandatory; that they do not intend to contravene the Geneva Convention, or existing civil and military law governing American servicemen; and that the Code affirms the Army's position in the REKAP-K program for Korean War POWs.
