INDEX

Note

This report is the most comprehensive ever compiled on the complex subject of officer education and training and the Army school system. Its size (840 pp.) dictated the need for an index.

It was neither practical nor appropriate to go all the way down through the subject matter to provide a completely definitive index, nor was it considered necessary to give a full breakout of single major categories. Thus the user will find block entries for the Army War College, for example, and the Command and General Staff College.

This should not pose a problem, for a horizontal check of a subject such as electives, against a vertical check of a school, will provide a point of intersection and focus and make it possible to search out detail. Cross reference will guide the user to subject areas.

In view of the size of the report and of the indexing task, and to insure the availability of the index as promptly as possible in connection with staffing, certain types of information were not included. Such details as academic departments, courses and subjects within schools are not provided (nor was it possible to identify all courses listed in Tables, but only those identified in the text). Geographical locations and post names were omitted since they may be readily found by consulting the list of schools:

The reader is advised that all officials, departments, agencies and institutions are indexed by their titles and names derived from normal usage, except that the common prefix "US Army" has been dropped in the majority of cases (i.e. Combat Developments Command, but Army Materiel Command). Secretaries are listed under the letter S; Departments under D; Chiefs under C; Deputies under D; Assistant Deputies and Chiefs under A; Universities are listed under U in appropriate instances, and under their respective names where indicated, for example, University of Maryland, but Johns Hopkins University.
