Foreword

In 1990 Air University Press published the Air University Review Index so that the 40 years of the Air University Review could remain a vital academic tool in the process of professional military education. The successor to the Review, the Airpower Journal, has now been in existence for five years. During that time, it has grown from a fledgling publication, dedicated to the advancement of air power and the understanding of air power's application to the operational level of war, into the premier journal on air power doctrine. Its pages regularly contain the ideas and concepts that air power is built upon and that air power thinkers advocate for the future of the profession.

This new index is a culmination of the first five years of effort to use the writings of Air Force people to increase the service's base of professional knowledge and to encourage broad discussion of air power subjects. The Airpower Journal has truly become a professional journal "by and for the Air Force."

About the Editor

Lt Col Michael A. Kirtland

Lt Col Michael A. Kirtland is a military doctrine analyst assigned to the Airpower Research Institute, Air University Center for Aerospace Doctrine, Research, and Education, Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama. He served as the first associate editor of the Airpower Journal, from its inception in 1987 through 1990. Colonel Kirtland is the editor of the Air University Review Index, which covers the entire 40-year existence of the Review. He has published articles and editorials in the English and foreign language editions of the Airpower Journal and in other military and academic publications. He previously served as a military studies instructor at the United States Air Force Academy. His operational assignments include tours as a Titan II missile launch officer and as a member of the initial cadre for the ground launched cruise missile (GLCM), serving in the training squadron and as chief of training for the GLCM wing at Florennes, Belgium. Colonel Kirtland holds a BA degree in history from Coe College and an MA degree in public administration from the University of Colorado. He is a graduate of Squadron Officer School, Air Command and Staff College, and Air War College.

Preface

This index includes all articles and editorials from the first five volumes of the Airpower Journal. It does not include book reviews. All entries are indexed by author, title, and subject. The subject index divides all entries into 102 categories. Within a subject category the articles are listed chronologically, allowing the reader to locate articles from specific time periods. Articles and editorials may be cross-referenced in up to five different categories. The typical entry includes the author's name, title of the article/editorial, volume number, issue number, date of issue, and inclusive page numbers. In each case, the editor has tried to be sufficiently broad-minded in making category assignments so that articles only marginally appropriate for a category are included rather than excluded. Category titles are based on those used in the Air University Review Index. Three category names have been changed as follows: "Air Base Defense" became "Air Base Survivability," "Tactical Air Control" became "Tactical Air Control System," and "Remotely Piloted Vehicles" became "Unmanned Aerial Vehicles." New categories are "Defense Reform," "Dissent," "Fighter Operations," "Professional Readings," "Soviet Doctrine," "Special Operations," and "Strategic Defense Initiative." Selection for inclusion within a category was based on the judgment of the editor.
