LIAOWANG ON ZHAO'S FORTHCOMING EUROPEAN TRIP

HK270639 Beijing LIAOWANG in Chinese No 22, 28 May 84 p 6

[Article by Huang Sixian [7806 1835 63432: "Strengthen Friendly Cooperation and Safeguard World Peace--on Premier Zhao Ziyang's Visit to Western Europe"]

[Text] Premier Zhao Ziyang will start, on 30 May, his nearly 3-week European tour, which will take him to France, Belgium, the EC, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, and Italy. It will be the first official and friendly visit to Western Europe by a Chinese head of government since the convening of the 12th CPC National Congress. This is a major event in Sino-West European relations and a diplomatic event of far-reaching significance to consolidate these ties.

Premier Zhao Ziyang's forthcoming visit to Western Europe is aimed at strengthening friendly cooperation, expanding economic exchanges, and safeguarding world peace. Although West European countries are far from China geographically and have different social systems, there are no direct conflicts of interest between them. West European countries share identical or similar views with China on many major international issues. On many international occasions, the two sides can consult and coordinate with each other. In the economic field, they have a desire to cooperate further in many areas for the benefit of both sides. Therefore, there exists a broad prospect and a sound foundation for more friendly cooperation between China and Western Europe.

The six nations which Zhao Ziyang is going to visit, except for Sweden and Norway, are all member countries of the EC. China's relationship with the EC has been developing steadily since the establishment of diplomatic relations in November 1983. Now, the EC is one of the biggest trading partners of China, second to Japan. Revival of the tie between the two sides have been greatly strengthened and a [word indistinct] of carrying out regular political consultations has been established. Cooperation between the two sides in many areas is developing steadily.

France will be the first leg of Premier Zhao Ziyang's six-nation European tour. In 1964, France was the first Western power to establish diplomatic relations with China. Over the past 20 years, the two countries have promoted friendly cooperation in many spheres. The visit of President Francois Mitterrand to China last year added a new chapter to the annals of Sino-French friendly relations.
Contracts between China and Belgium can be dated from the middle of the 17th century. The observatory outside the Jianguo Wall Gate of Beijing, called Nanhuaien, which was designed and built by a Belgian missionary, still stands erect. This is the most telling witness of long cultural exchanges between China and Belgium. Since the founding of long cultural exchanges between China and Belgium established diplomatic relations in 1972, friendly cooperation and economic and trade relations between the two countries have been continuously strengthened.

Scandinavian countries have friendly relations with China. Sweden, Denmark, and Norway were among the first Western countries which proclaimed recognition of and established diplomatic relations with new China. In recent years, great progress has been made in China's trade with Sweden, Denmark, and Norway and bilateral cooperation in the economic and technical fields has become much closer.

Italy will be the last leg of Premier Zhao Ziyang's six-nation European tour. The achievements of the Italian traveler Marco Polo in the 13th century in China, where he stayed and worked for 17 years, have long gone down in history as a symbol of friendship between the Chinese and Italian peoples. Italy is one of the Western countries which established trade relations with new China during the initial period following its founding. Over recent years, political relations between the two countries have also been strengthened. The visit of Italian President Sandro Pertini to China in 1980 was the first made by an Italian head of state, symbolizing the smooth development of Sino-Italian friendly relations.

During his six-nation European tour, Premier Zhao will hold talks with the leaders of these West European countries on matters of common concern. He will also make important speeches on China's independent peaceful foreign policy and the policy of opening China to the outside world. West European countries and China all face the common task of opposing hegemonism, maintaining national security, and safeguarding world peace. China supports Western Europe in its active role in international affairs. A strong and united Western Europe is not only in the interests of its people but also an important factor in maintaining world peace and security. It is believed that the Chinese Premier's forthcoming visit will strengthen China's political and economic ties and cooperation with Western Europe and will put Sino-West European relations on a firmer foundation of safeguarding world peace and consolidating economic cooperation with Western Europe.

ITALIAN MINISTER GIVES LUNCHEON FOR ZHAO

[Text] Milan, Italy, 16 Jun (XINHUA)--Italian Minister Without Portfolio Francesco Forte gave a luncheon here today in honor of Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang.

In his speech at the luncheon, Forte, who is in charge of European Economic Community coordination policies, said the Italian Government is confident in a further development in the economic and technological cooperation between Italy and China and in the friendship between the two peoples after the successful visit of the Chinese premier.

He said further development should be made intrade between the two countries. It is not important whether to register surplus or deficit, but it is important to promote trade, he added.

He also said that in the process of achieving the unification and unity of Europe, European countries should help each other and coordinate with China.

In his reply, Premier Zhao described his talks with Italian leaders in the past few days as "fruitful".

A principal objective of his visit is to enhance the economic and technological cooperation between China and Italy and to promote the friendship between their peoples, he said, adding that he is convinced that a new situation of Sino-Italian economic and technological cooperation will emerge after his visit.

The Chinese premier said his visit to Italy has left him a deep and good impression. He was warmly applauded when he said the visit was arranged as the last leg of his European tour because the last show is often the best.

Premier Zhao praised Milan, Italy's largest industrial and commercial center, for its contribution to promoting the friendship and the economic and technological cooperation between Italy and China.

Among those attending the luncheon were President of the Lombardia Regional Government Giuseppe Guzzetti, President of the Lombardia Regional Parliament Renzo Peruzzotti, Governor of Milan Province Vincenzo Vicari and President of the Italy-China Economic and Cultural Exchange Association Vittorino Colombo.

BRIEFS

FRG ON REAGAN'S ARMS TALKS—Bonn, 2 Jul (XINHUA)—The Federal German Government today welcomed U.S. President Ronald Reagan's acceptance of talks with the Soviet Union on space arms, and favored the President's proposal for resumption of nuclear arms talks between the two superpowers. A government spokesman said in a statement today that Moscow's response to Reagan's proposal was unsatisfactory and hoped it is not a final decision. The Soviet Union urged the United States last Friday to hold talks on anti-satellite weapons. The Soviet proposal was quickly received with a U.S. agreement to meet as suggested, coupled with a proposal that the stalled negotiations on strategic and medium-range nuclear missiles should be resumed simultaneously. But the U.S. proposal was turned down by the Soviets. The spokesman said that the government held that negotiations between the two countries on space arms, strategic weapons and medium-range nuclear missiles are necessary. Only when the U.S.-Soviet talks resumed could the arms control talks between the East and the West be reopened, he said. [Text] [OWO31343 Beijing XINHUA in English 1323 GMT 3 Jul 84]

FRENCH AIR FORCE 'MIRAGE 2000'—Paris, 2 Jul (XINHUA)—The first group of 15 Mirage 2000 jet fighters were handed over to the French Air Force today. The French made fighter has a speed of over 2,400 kilometers per hour (about 1,500 miles) and can reach an altitude of 18,000 meters (60,000 feet). Equipped with sophisticated electronic instruments the fighter can intercept at any altitude. The development of the Mirage 2000 demonstrates that France is seeking a policy of military independence now that the U.S.-Soviet arms race has been intensified. At the end of 1988, 243 of France's 450 fighters will be Mirage 2000s. France has sold 104 of the new aircraft to India, Egypt, Peru and other countries. 'SOCIALIST ALIENATION' VIEWED AS INIMICAL TO SOCIALISM

Guiyang GUIZHOU SHEHUI KEXUE /GUIZHOU SOCIAL SCIENCE/ in Chinese No 2, 20 Mar 84 pp 21-24

Article by Wang Yangxiang /3769 3057 4382/ and Dun Zhanmin /7319 0594 3046/: "How Does the Theory of 'Socialist Alienation' Deviate From Marxism?"

In the past several years, some people have energetically advocated the theory of "socialist alienation," and this is one important manifestation of spiritual pollution on the theoretical front. To clear away this spiritual pollution, we must expose the fact that this view deviates from the essence of Marxism.

I. The Theory of "Socialist Alienation" Takes as Its Premise a Distortion of Marx's Idea of Alienation

The concept of alienation is a historical category. Rousseau, a thinker of the 18th-century Enlightenment, put forward the concept of alienation as the relinquishing of the people's power to a political structure. Hegel made alienation a historical category and incorporated it into his speculative philosophy as a conceptual category in itself. Feuerbach used alienation primarily to criticize religious theology, his basic idea being that God is the alienation of man from his essential self." Feuerbach's view of alienation was based upon an acceptance of an abstract, constant essence of man, and the foundation was the humanism of historical idealism.

Marx's idea of alienation derived from Hegel's and Feuerbach's ideas, even though he later criticized their notions of alienation. In his "Economic and Philosophical Manuscripts of 1844," Marx pointed out that private property is a product of alienated labor and is also the prerequisite for alienation. He also said: "Communism is the positive sublation of private property, namely, man's self-alienation." Thus Marx transferred the category of alienation from the field of pure theory to the domain of social practice, analyzed the economic relationships of capitalism, and tried to bring to light, through alienated labor, the essential connections between labor and private ownership.
Beginning with his "Theses on Feuerbach" and "The German Ideology," there were indications that Marx had already grown into a mature Marxist. At this time he put forward the basic theory of historical materialism. In his later, mature works, from "The Communist Manifesto" to "Das Kapital," although he still used the concept of alienation, he did so primarily to expose the exploitation and oppression of the worker by capital, and it was no more than a "technical term of philosophy" that was "temporarily used" for the understanding of philosophers. That is to say, at this time Marx no longer made the concept of alienation a central concept running through his entire philosophy. For this reason, he sharply criticized the German "orthodox socialists" for overusing the concept of alienation, and he criticized the Young Hegelians for "saying that any object or relation is a thing alienated from myself and is my alienation," and for "turning these relations and individuals into completely abstract expressions of alienation." Marx also firmly criticized the viewpoint that explains socialism from the perspective of man's abstract essence, maintaining that communism does not start by looking for 'essences.' After Marx founded the doctrine of historical materialism, from first to last he made this scientific world outlook his method of observing social phenomena and of analyzing the economic relationships of capitalism. Moreover, he discarded the use of the canopy of alienation to observe social phenomena, instead establishing a scientific basis for the observation of social phenomena and the doctrine of socialism. Thus it can be seen that the formation of Marx's nation of alienation involved a process of development from Hegel's to Feuerbach's ideas and from Marx's theory of alienation in his early period to his mature view of alienation. This process was consistent with the process of change in Marx's philosophical thought. One certainly must not blur the various stages of Marx's idea of alienation by taking the immature ideas of his early years as authentic Marxism.

After Marx became a Marxist he used the alienation category only to expose the wage labor system of capitalism, and because capitalism is only a temporary historical phenomenon it reflects those temporary phenomena of the alienation category, which is also historical and temporary. Marx never used this category to explain socialist phenomena.

The theory of "socialist alienation" confuses the theory of alienating in Marx's early period with his mature nation of alienation and obliterates the distinction between the socialist system and the capitalist system. It expands Marx's specific intent to use alienation as a critique of capitalism into a category possessing universal meaning and elevates it as the central concept of Marxism. This actually is the opposite path that Marx took in forming Marxism from its immature stage. Marx went from Hegel's objective idealism through Feuerbach's humanism to the dialectical materialism and historical materialism of Marxism. The theory of "socialist alienation" forsakes the historical materialism established by Marx and goes backward in advocating that humanism's theory of alienation possesses universal meaning.
II. The Crucial Point of the Theory of "Socialist Alienation" Is Its Negation of the Socialist System

The theory of "socialist alienation" distorts Marx's concept of alienation by hoisting the banner of humanism, and with this as a weapon it criticizes socialism, thus inevitably creating a serious situation involving doubts about and negation of the socialist system.

First of all, the theory of "socialist alienation" says that the division of labor that exists in a socialist society is the cause of alienation in socialism. For example, some people say: "The existing division of labor in a socialist society is the basis for the existing alienation." Marx indeed said that the division of labor is a form of alienation and is also the necessary condition for producing alienation. But what kind of division of labor was Marx talking about? What Marx talked about as being the division of labor, that is a form of and condition for alienation, was the spontaneous, old-type division of labor, that is, private ownership of the means of production. Marx pointed out that division of labor "reduces the worker from being a machine to being a pure appendage of the machine." "Division of labor and private ownership of the means of production are two synonyms, they mean the same thing." It is thus obvious that what Marx regarded as the expression of alienation was also the division of labor conditioned by alienation, and meant the division of labor under conditions of the capitalist society, which was a division of labor that was of the old type and spontaneous and that possessed an antagonistic nature. Socialism's division of labor is not like this, because socialism has achieved the public ownership of the means of production and the laboring people have already become the masters of the country. Therefore, the nature of the redivision of labor existing under socialism is different, and socialism has already eliminated the antagonistic nature and spontaneous nature of the old-type division of labor. When discussing the differences existing in the Soviet Union between industry and agriculture, city and countryside, physical labor and mental labor, Stalin pointed out that between them "the bases for antagonism have already been eliminated by our country's present socialist system." The division of labor existing under the socialist system in essence if no longer a form that expresses alienation, and is also no longer a condition for producing alienation. The basis and necessary conditions for socialist alienation talked about by the "theory of socialist alienation" basically do not exist.

The theory of "socialist alienation" expounds in a focused manner on the so-called "overall alienation" of socialism. There are even people who say that there exist in a socialist society overall, universal phenomena of political, economic, and ideological alienation.
They say: "Alienation is the concentrated expression of all the malpractices of socialism, and it provides the most scientific explanation for the existence of a large number of ugly phenomena in society." Precisely on this basis, they say that in a socialist society "man's world is constantly being devalued, and the world of objects (including power) is constantly rising in value," and that alienation makes people "become both pitiful and worthless animals," even saying: "The source of socialist alienation is the socialist system itself." This is to remove the specific, historical meaning of Marx's idea of alienation, and directly brings in the language in which Marx criticized the capitalist system as a criticism of the socialist system, and directly ascribes to the socialist system the ugly phenomena inherent in a capitalist society, denying the essential difference between the socialist system and the capitalist system. The principles of the scientific socialisms of Marxism tell us that the purpose of the proletariat's socialist revolution is to eliminate alienation. Under the socialist system, private ownership has been abolished and public ownership established, and distribution according to work has been put into practice. All of this abolishes exploitation, and thus also abolishes labor's alienation.

How are the scars of the old society that exist in the socialist society to be recognized? This is another area in which the theory of "socialist alienation" creates confusion. The authors of the Marxist classics have always maintained that, because socialism emerged from the womb of the old society, it unavoidably bears the scars of the old society in many respects. In our actual life these scars really exist, including bureaucratism, unhealthy tendencies, as well as weak links in production relations and the superstructure that are unsuitable for the development of the production forces. Without the slightest doubt, all these things are contradictions that must be resolved in the advance of socialism. However, it should be noted here that the authors of the Marxist classics have always called these problems the "scars of the old society" and never called them "alienation." The "scars" are remnants of the old society in the public ownership base that are being overcome, and they themselves are not "alienation;" "alienation" is the product and manifestation of the private ownership base. "Scars" and "alienation" differ in the following three aspects: 1) "Scars" are things of a partial nature, but alienation possesses the nature of a whole; 2) the contradiction of the "scars" is of a nonantagonistic nature, but the contradiction of "alienation" is of an antagonistic nature; and 3) the "scars" are being constantly adjusted, resolved, and overcome by the socialist society itself, but the elimination of "alienation" must be achieved through social revolution. The theory of "socialist alienation" denies these differences and calls alienation what are obviously only the scars of the old society and boundlessly exaggerates the scope and scale of alienation, saying that there is alienation in each domain of socialist society, that is, overall alienation. This is a total repudiation of socialism.
III. The Theoretical Basis of the Theory of "Socialist Alienation" Is Humanistic Idealism

That the theory of "socialist alienation" has appeared in our country in the past several years is not fortuitous; it has its philosophical basis. This philosophical basis is the so-called "study of man" that has recently entered China, and its origin is humanism, which was long ago criticized by the founders of Marxism.

After World War II, and especially in the past 20 years or so, in the West there has gradually sprung up a so-called "philosophy of man," or what is called "the study of man," which meets the needs of imperialism and the bourgeoisie for opposing socialism and Marxism. Existentialism, personalism, and structuralism can all be considered schools of this "study of man" ideological trend. They have openly put forward the proposition that man is to be made the starting point and center of philosophy; under the pretense of studying, being concerned about, respecting, and focusing man, they advocate with all their might the abstract theory of human nature and humanitarianism. Following the implementation of our country's policy of opening to the outside world (which is absolutely necessary and completely correct), the cultural interchange with foreign countries, and the introduction into China of the science and technology of some advanced countries, there have also appeared in large numbers the dregs of the bourgeoisie, and of which is the so-called "study of man." Some people do not use Marxism but rather use the "study of man" to sum up our experiences and lessons and to comment on the faults during our advance. In this atmosphere, some theoretical workers have been taken prisoner by the "study of man." In their view, our past stress only on the philosophy of dialectical materialism and historical materialism was inadequate, and thus they blame us for "neglecting for a long time the question of man in philosophical studies." They raise a cry of warning that now the so-called "study of man" must be used to "supplement" the historical materialism of Marxism, when they really would use it to transform or replace the Marxist philosophy and Marxism. The expression "man is the starting point of Marxism" is the concentrated embodiment of this trend of thought. The "theory of socialist alienation" was produced against the background of the great inundation of this "study of man," and it is the expression and derivative of the anti-Marxist "study of man."

The theory of "socialist alienation" makes abstract human nature, man's essence, and humanitarianism the starting point for observing society, and uses them to design a pattern of socialism. For example, some articles pick out and advocate the words and phrases of Feuerbach's humanism, which the nature Marx had already abandoned. They say: "Marx said: 'The purpose of all history is to make "man" become a perceptual, conscious object and to make the requirement for "man to be man" become the preparation for the (natural, perceptual) requirement.' The development of history is nothing more than a process of man's preparation and formation. Mankind's consciousness of its own characteristic strength as man is the basis of man's total value and dignity, and is a powerful force for promoting man's development and perfection." Here people do not see, as they do in historical materialism, the production forces, this most fundamental motive force for mankind's historical development; they ignore the contradiction between the forces of production and relations of production and they ignore class struggle, which is the expression of this contradiction in class society, this lever promoting the advance of history. What people see is only abstract-man and abstract consciousness concerning man. From this we can see that they have already completely abandoned the historical materialism of Marxism! For example, they say: "Everything for man. This is the yardstick with which to measure all social behavior and the criterion by which to distinguish all ideological theories." They also say: "Man's value and the degree of man's emancipation are the indicators for inspecting the superiority of socialism." Their pattern designed for socialism is also permeated with this kind of preaching about abstract man. For example they say: "In a socialist society, dehumanization must truly be eliminated and man's value must be fully respected." They even nakedly raise the slogans of "human rights," "democracy, liberty peace," which were put forward in the period of the bourgeois revolution. These are conditions that the bourgeoisie can completely accept.

The "theory of socialist alienation" emerged precisely from the womb of these words and phrases about abstract man. Proceeding from abstract man, these people think that any society, system, behavior, thought, theory, and so forth that does not uniform to their so-called "human nature," "human essence," and "human value" is, in all cases, alienation.

The theory of "socialist alienation" is nothing more than the so-called "study of man," and it also proceeds from abstract human nature and man's essence. The bourgeois "study of man" serves as the theoretical basis of the "theory of socialist alienation." Because this bourgeois, anti-Marxist "study of man" departs from actual social relations and from social requirements and organizational discipline, and abstractedly talks about the individual's liberty, value, and rights, it can only encourage the pernicious development of the bourgeoisie's individualism and jeopardize the building of socialist spiritual civilization. In particular, the "theory of socialist alienation," which is derived from this theoretical basis, in essence completely negates our socialist system. Therefore, when cleaning up spiritual pollution, we must also get rid of this theoretical foundation for the "theory of socialist alienation."
SHANDONG: PROVINCIAL ACHIEVEMENTS IN PARTY RECTIFICATION

SK020407 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 30 Jun 84

[Excerpts] Over the past year, our province has scored remarkable achievements in party building in the course of party rectification and economic construction. After the promulgation of the central decision on party rectification, the party organizations and the broad masses of party members across the province have extensively studied, relayed, and implemented it. The provincial-level leading bodies including the standing committees of the provincial CPC committee, and the provincial government's party group, and the various departments, commissions, offices and bureaus of the provincial level organs have been designated as the first group of party rectification units. They have started comprehensive party rectification since last winter.

Since the party rectification, the provincial-level units have sponsored 412 party-member rotational training courses and have conducted education on basic knowledge of the party for 5,724 party members who have been recruited into the party since 1966.

Many units have taken the initiative in investigating and handling cases concerning party style so as to further improve it. The provincial-level organs have discovered 806 cases involving cadres who occupied excessive houses, and about 98 percent of these cases had been handled. The party organizations where party rectification has not yet been conducted have not adopted a wait-and-see attitude. They have studied documents and conducted reforms before party rectification. The province as a whole has sponsored 16,400 training courses for partymembers with 2.73 million party members attending. Since last winter, some 77,000 rural party branches have been readjusted, accounting for 90 percent of the total number of rural party branches. Of the 5,400 units which conducted enterprise consolidation, about 70 percent also consolidated their party organizations. Stimulated by the party rectification work, the broad masses of party members have played a vanguard and exemplary role on all fronts, thus promoting the province's economic development. During the period between January and May, the province's total industrial output value increased 11.98 percent over the corresponding period of last year. Despite the serious drought during last winter and this spring, the province still reaped a bumper wheat harvest.
Over the past year, the CPC committees at all levels, in line with the four requirements for cadres, have carried out organizational reform, and strengthened leading bodies and the building of the cadre ranks. So far, about 94 percent of the leading bodies of the provincial-level departments, commissions, offices and bureaus has been readjusted and the restructuring of leading bodies of prefectures, cities, and counties has been totally completed. About 70 percent of counties have completed turning communes into townships. The age and educational structures of the newly readjusted leading bodies have been further improved. In line with the spirit of the party rectification decision, the party organizations at all levels have conscientiously attended to party member recruitment work. Intellectuals and rural specialized peasant households accounted for a fairly large proportion of the newly recruited party members. Of the more than 50,000 party members recruited last year, 23 percent were scientific and technical workers. Presently, the broad masses of party members in the province are working hard on the various fronts so as to greet the 35th anniversary of the PRC's founding with outstanding achievements.

JIANGSU CONGRESS STANDING COMMITTEE ENDS SESSION

OW201321 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 17 Jun 84

[Text] The Seventh Session of the Sixth Jiangsu Provincial People's Congress Standing Committee ended in Nanjing this afternoon.

Vice Chairman Zhong Guochu presided over today's plenary session. After hearing Vice Governor Yang Yongyi's explanations on the "provisional regulations on popularizing universal primary education in Jiangsu Province (draft)" and the "provisional regulations on eliminating illiteracy in Jiangsu Province (draft)," the session seriously discussed the draft regulations. The standing committee members maintained that it is of great significance to run primary education well in order to raise the nation's scientific, cultural, ideological and moral standards. Elimination of illiteracy is also a necessary condition for enhancing the urban and rural people's scientific, technological and cultural levels and for building socialist material and spiritual civilization.

To swiftly change the situation in the province of illiteracy elimination work falling behind economic growth and of tardiness in popularizing primary education, it is absolutely necessary to take legislative measures to ensure fulfillment of universal primary education and accomplishment of the historical task of wiping out illiteracy. The meeting decided to amend the two draft regulations and to submit them to the second session of the sixth provincial people's congress for deliberation. The meeting approved in principle the work report of the sixth provincial people's congress standing committee, and entrusted Vice Chairman He Binghao with making amendments according to the views presented by the standing committee members at the session. The amended work report will be presented at the second session of the sixth provincial people's congress.

Today's meeting also discussed, in accordance with the Jiangsu Provincial CPC Committee's suggestion, a namelist of candidate standing committee members to be elected at the second session of the sixth provincial people's congress, and consented to submit the namelist to the congress presidium for examination and decision.

CHEN GUODONG SPEECH AT JIEFANG RIBAO ANNIVERSARY

OWI40825 Shanghai JIEFANG RIBAO in Chinese 29 May 84 p 1

[Excerpts] In a speech at a meeting commemorating the 35th anniversary of JIEFANG RIBAO on 28 May, Chen Guodong, first secretary of the Shanghai Municipal CPC Committee, put forth a seven-point proposal for improving party newspaper and mass media work.

1. A party newspaper must uphold party spirit and maintain ideological and political unity with the party Central Committee. As a propaganda tool of the party, a party newspaper must unconditionally propagate Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and the party Central Committee's line, principles and policies, uphold the four fundamental principles and maintain unity with the party Central Committee. It must not go its own way and to different things.

2. A Shanghai newspaper must have its special characteristics. It is necessary to combine the reality of Shanghai in propagating the party's line, principles and policies. Shanghai shoulders a heavy but honorable task in building socialist material and spiritual civilization. It should try to make the greatest possible contribution to the modernization program in the whole country and score achievements in the new global technological revolution. The political and economic situation in Shanghai has become better and better in recent years, but difficulties and problems remain. A Shanghai newspaper should give publicity to these specific questions in order to guide and promote the work in Shanghai.

3. A party newspaper must uphold the principle of seeking truth from facts. Our party has always stressed the importance of factually reporting the news and refraining from making empty talk. Only truthful news reports can really convince and mobilize people. It is the fundamental principle of proletarian journalism, and a fine tradition of party newspapers to report the news factually. Our journalists must regard this principle as their code of conduct and conscientiously abide by it, never neglecting it at anytime.

4. A party newspaper must enhance its mass character and militancy. It must publicize good people and good things and correctly conduct criticism. It should not only report good news but also make criticism. Our party has always paid keen attention to criticism and self-criticism published in newspapers; they are really effective. Some people who defy criticism of their mistakes by higher authorities may mend their ways when they are reported in newspapers. The same applies to some slow-going projects. If they are criticized by newspapers, conditions may change. In this regard, JIEFANG RIBAO and other newspapers have done a good job in the past 2 years. Currently, it is comparatively difficult to conduct criticism and self-criticism regarding our inner-party life and, with the mounting obstacles, it is even more difficult to conduct criticism in newspapers. The municipal party committee and the party committees at various levels must pay keen attention to this problem and correctly solve it by enhancing party spirit in the course of carrying out party rectification. Every front must take criticism by a party newspaper in a correct manner and regard it as a motive force to push the work forward. The party organizations at various levels must support and help party newspapers to correctly unfold criticism. Of course, it is a serious matter to make criticism in newspapers. Journalists should use this weapon carefully and effectively. Experience shows that the most important principle a newspaper must observe in making criticism is that what is criticized must have been checked. It is also necessary to enable the person criticized to defend himself, offer an explanation and make countercriticism. If the criticism a newspaper has made is wrong, it must itself also conduct self-criticism. Newspapers can further enhance their mass character and militancy if they frequently reflect the opinion and voice of the masses and correctly unfold criticism.

5. A party newspaper should be able to report news in a lively and interesting manner as the masses like to see or hear.

6. It is necessary to run the newspaper by the party. To run a newspaper well in the new period and under the new situation, it is necessary to stress the tradition of having not only journalists but also the party run the newspaper.

7. Journalists must step up their self-education. "A teacher must first teach himself." To educate people everyday, journalists must first educate themselves. Journalists of a party newspaper must first fulfill the requirement that the party newspaper should get the broad masses of cadres and people to comply. At the same time, they must continuously strive to raise their political awareness and theoretical understanding and improve their knowledge and writing skill. Journalists must strive to turn themselves into proletarian fighters of journalism, in name as well as in deed, with both political integrity and professional competence.

ZHAO ZENGYI ATTENDS JIANGXI MEETING ON REFORMS

OW182222 Nanchang Jiangxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 15 Jun 84

[Excerpts] The Jiangxi Provincial CPC Committee and the provincial people's government have decided to select Pingxiang and Jingdezhen cities as locations to carry out urban economic reforms on an experimental basis. A discussion meeting on 14 June was attended by responsible comrades in the two cities and the departments concerned at the provincial level. Zhao Zengyi, Ni Xiance, Qian Jianing, and other comrades attended and addressed the meeting. The meeting held that the overall economic reforms in the cities on an experimental basis should be carried out systematically and intensively.

The meeting held that the key to carrying out urban economic reforms at present lies in transferring the decisionmaking power to the lower-level units and implementing the contract system. Efforts must be made to carry out reforms in the following six aspects:

1. In the field of planning, efforts must be made to carry out planning carefully and systematically.

2. With regard to the import of machinery and equipment from foreign countries, the city assigned to carry out reforms is authorized to screen and approve any case involving the use of foreign exchange kept by an enterprise itself for its own use to order machinery or equipment under U.S.$1 million as well as any capital construction or small-scale construction project under 1.5 million yuan which are raised by the construction unit itself.

3. In delivering profits to the state, efforts must be made to regard the 1983 figures as a basic index and sign contracts to ensure continuous growth for a period of 4 years with an annual growth rate of 10 percent.

4. In the field of supplies, all necessary supplies covered by various plans must be delivered to all households and factories.

5. In structural establishment, cities assigned to carry out urban reforms on an experimental basis may proceed from reality and adopt flexible measures in this regard, instead of rigidly following the rules set by the provincial authority.
6. With regard to transferring the decisionmaking power of enterprises to the lower-level departments, and in order to make things convenient for the cities assigned to carry out urban economic reforms on an experimental basis and effect economic readjustments and promote economic development, enterprises now under provincial administration should be gradually placed under the management of those cities appointed to carry out the reforms on a trial basis.

FUZHOU MILITARY REGION ADOPTS NEW CADRE EVALUATION SYSTEM

OW250919 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1256 GMT 24 Jun 84

[By correspondent Lei Zhiqing and reporter Yang Hefa]

[Text] Fuzhou, 24 Jun (XINHUA)--A certain army of the PLA Fuzhou Military Region has been using the cadre post promotion and demotion system on a trial basis for 1 year. As a result, over 220 incompetent cadres have been ordered to correct their errors within a set period, transferred to a lower level, relieved of their posts or demoted, while 686 cadres who are capable and promising and have taken the initiative to advance have been awarded or promoted. Cadres and fighters praise this system as a good measure to "punish the lazy, encourage the industrious, promote the good and demote the mediocre."

Drawing on the experience of the local authorities last June, this army has engaged in this reform of the cadres' management system on a trial basis. While strengthening ideological education, this army, in accordance with the limits of its authority over appointments and removals, has dealt with cadres who work sluggishly and lack initiative, whose ability falls short of the desired ability or who are unequal to their posts. Within a set period these cadres have become capable and achieved results in their work. They may be restored to their posts according to or ahead of schedule. Some may even be promoted.

The party committee of that army specifically pointed out: The reform of the cadres management system must help protect, support and assign qualified personnel devoted to reform. It is necessary to distinguish between cadres who have quite a few shortcomings but are creative in their work, and cadres who are irresponsible and act blindly and carelessly; and between cadres who dare to reform but who are slow in making progress and cadres who are incompetent. In handling cadres, we must integrate the masses' criticism and discussion with the party committee's overall evaluation and seek truth from facts and must not act impetuously.

The adoption of the cadre post promotion and demotion system has shaken up a number of people and spurred on a number of people. The party committee of that army has decided to transfer three incompetent regimental-level cadres from their key leading posts and remove some incompetent battalion and company cadres from their posts or demote them. A company political instructor of a certain regiment worked hard and played an exemplary role. However, he was poorly educated and incompetent. After being in his post for 4 years, he had turned an advanced company into a backward unit. The party committee decided to remove him from his post, send him to receive more education and be assigned later to a new post in accordance with his studies. This event has aroused the vigilance of more than 300 of the army's cadres who are incompetent and lack initiative. They have come to understand that to meet the new situation in modernization, they must study hard to master true knowledge and skills and can no longer drift along aimlessly as in past days. Many people have made up their minds to raise their capability quickly and create a new situation in work at the grassroots units, or else they will voluntarily ask for dismissal or demotion.

SHANGHAI: CHEN GUODONG MEETS SYMPOSIUM PARTICIPANTS

OW041445 Shanghai City Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 2 Jul 84

[Text] According to our reporter (Zhu Weici), an 11-day symposium on reform in the management of higher educational institutions, cosponsored by the Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Labor and Personnel, concluded on the morning of 2 July in this municipality.

A summing-up speech was made at the symposium by He Dongchang, minister of education. He said: With regard to reform of higher educational institutions, we must make clear that the purpose of reform is to train more competent personnel and to achieve greater results in education. In no way should reform be interpreted merely as delegation of power to the lower levels, resulting in increase in income or, more specifically, in a bonus equivalent to 2 and 1/2 months of an average wage. Every school should set its work target and try to achieve that target through efforts to reform its management.

He Dongchang continued: In reforming the management of higher educational institutions, we should not rely on the same method in all cases. Nor should we rush headlong into mass action along the same pattern. Instead, our methods should vary from school to school and should be suited to local conditions. In making management reforms, it is, first of all, necessary to grasp the basic work. This includes readjustment of all levels of leading bodies, fixing the number of personnel, institution of the individual responsibility system, evaluation of job performance. Among these, evaluation of job performance is of key importance. There should be a clear distinction between good, fair, and poor performance.

He Dongchang pointed out: In making reform in higher educational institutions, it is necessary to give full scope to people's initiative and see to it that everyone is doing his job well. We do not approve of such methods as linking a teacher's remuneration with his students' scores or signing contracts for teaching work. This is because mental work has its own characteristics, and it is rather complicated to determine the quality and quantity of this work.

According to what this reporter learned from the symposium on reform of management of higher educational institutions, the Ministry of Labor and Personnel and the Ministry of Education have designated seven institutions in the country to reform their wage systems on a trial basis. They include Jiatong and Fudan universities in Shanghai.

While the symposium was in session, leaders of the Shanghai Municipal Party Committee and the municipal government Chen Guodong, Ju Lijiao, and Wang Daohan met with representatives attending the symposium.

SHANDONG REPORTS TRANSFERRING TEACHERS TO OTHER JOBS

SK190457 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service In Mandarin 2388 CHI 12 Jun 84

[Text] The organization and propaganda departments of the provincial CPC committee and the leading party group of the provincial education department recently issued a joint circular calling for efforts to stop transferring backbone teachers to other lines of jobs in the course of institutional reform and changing communes into townships.

The circular urges: First, we should continue to implement the circular of the Ministry of Education on preventing colleges and universities and other departments from arbitrarily recruiting teachers from middle schools, teachers' training schools, and institutes of advanced studies for teachers, its opinions on readjusting, consolidating, and strengthening the management of the contingents of primary and middle school teachers, and the relevant stipulations of the decision on strengthening and reforming some issues on rural education issued by the provincial CPC committee and government. The management and transfer of primary and middle school teachers and the personnel of education departments at all levels and the filling of vacancies resulting from natural reduction should be carried out by educational administrative departments at and above the county level so as to stop transferring teachers of primary and middle schools, teachers' training schools and institutes of advanced studies to other lines of jobs.

Next, in the course of institutional reform and changing communes into townships, all departments should broaden their field of vision and open up more sources of talented people when they select cadres who meet the four requirements. In principle, they should not select from teachers. They should ask for the opinions of the educational administrative departments at and above the county level before they select from among the teachers the few leading cadres at and above the county level who should be selected from among teachers.

Third, backbone teachers who were already transferred from educational departments to other lines of jobs in the course of institutional reform and changing communes into townships should all be transferred back to their original posts except for those who have assumed the leading posts as section or bureau chiefs at the county level or above. From now on, county of district sections and bureaus should not recruit personnel from among primary and middle school teachers so as not to adversely influence the improvement of the teaching quality.

XIZANG: YIN FATANG AT GATHERING OF CADRES 23 JUN

[Text] On the afternoon of 23 June, the regional people's congress standing committee and the regional people's government [words indistinct] of cadres in the Lhasa City Working People's Cultural Palace to convey the spirit of the Second Session of the Sixth NPC. The gathering was presided over by Pagbalha Geleg Namgya, vice chairman of the regional people's congress standing committee. Attending the gathering were comrades including Yin Fatang, Ba Sang, and Song Ziyuan.

Jipu Pingcuocideng, a NPC deputy, deputy head of the Xizang delegation, and vice chairman of the regional people's government, conveyed the spirit of the Second Session of the Sixth NPC. What he conveyed was divided into three parts: 1) The general situation of the Second Session of the Sixth NPC: 2) on the government work report; 3) on the adoption of the two important laws—the law of the regional autonomy of minority nationalities and the military service law.

Jipu Pingcuocideng said: The most remarkable characteristics of this session was that it was full of the spirit of reform from start to finish. Reform is an important matter for which all people throughout the country have shown great concern, is a key link to completely create a new situation in socialist modernization, and is where hopes lie to invigorate our country and nation.

Jipu Pingcuocideng talked about the Xizang deputies' understanding of several aspects while they discussed the government work report in connection with the realities of party discipline.

1. Our region's development situation over the past few years has been good. Despite a continuous drought over the past few years, thanks to the correct principles and policies of the party, the masses' production and livelihood has been relatively stable.

2. After their return, the deputies are resolved to implement that spirit of the Second Session of the Sixth NPC and the spirit of the forum on Xizang work held by the central authorities. They have come to profoundly understand Xizang's special nature. They are resolved to persistently proceed from realities in everything, to emancipate their minds, and to quickly promote Xizang work.

3. It is necessary to seriously implement the spirit of being bold in carrying out reform. At present, enterprises in our region have the problem of eating out of the big rice pot. If we do not conduct reform, we cannot meet the needs of the development of the situation. We must boldly carry out reform and must relax policies.

4. It is essential to vigorously train technological talented persons and to give full play to the role of intellectuals in our region's construction. At present we must pay special attention to selecting for training those young talented persons of minority nationalities whose cultural level is relatively high.

In dealing with the law on the regional autonomy of minority nationalities, Jipu Pingcuocideng said: While the deputies at the session were discussing the law on the regional autonomy of minority nationalities, the atmosphere of the meeting was very lively. The deputies held: This law will play an important part in perfecting our country's system of the regional autonomy of minority nationalities, guaranteeing all minority nationalities the power of autonomy, handling minority nationalities' internal affairs with the initiative in their own hands, speeding up the economic and cultural development in minority nationality regions, upholding the unification of the state, and developing the socialist relationship of egalitarianism, unity, and mutual aid between nationalities.

In conclusion, Jipu Pingcuocideng said: The Second Session of the Sixth NPC was held while our country is making new and important achievements in domestic construction and foreign diplomatic work. It was an important meeting on the road of completely creating a new situation in socialist modernization. Premier Zhao's government work report is imbued with the advanced spirit of reform, encourages people, gives people strength and hopes, and is an extremely important document. We must study and understand it very well and must struggle hard to accomplish the tasks formulated by the Second Session of the Sixth NPC and to strengthen the building of socialist material and spiritual civilization.

At the gathering, Vice Chairman Pagbalha Geleg Namgya delivered an important speech on how people's congresses and governments at all levels in our region can implement well the spirit of the Second Session of the Sixth NPC.

[Text] After 5 months of efforts, the establishment of townships in communes and districts and the separation of government administration from commune management has been basically completed in Yunnan. Apart from the former (Dulongjiang) commune in Gongshan County, township governments have been elected and established everywhere.

Since January, the province has seriously implemented the instruction of the central and provincial CPC committees on separating government administration from commune management and establishing township governments. The province decided to send 37,000 cadres to the grassroots to organize this work. The province has basically established districts [qu] on the basis of the former communes, and established townships on the basis of the production brigades. Nationality townships have been established throughout minority-nationality areas.

While carrying out this work, the province has strictly followed legal procedures in democratically electing the township grassroots governments. In general the district and township cadres appointed as a result of this reform and election have a certain educational standard, and are relatively young and enthusiastic. The percentage of nationality cadres has risen somewhat. Proper arrangements have been made for cadres originally holding leading posts in communes and brigades.

A political situation of liveliness and vigor has appeared in the rural areas as a result of reforming the setup. This is stimulating still faster development of the rural economy.

QINGHAI GOVERNOR'S REPORT STRESSES REFORMS

HK010348 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 30 Jun 84

[Excerpts] In his government work report to the second session of the sixth provincial people's congress, Qinghai Governor Huang Jingbo spoke on the main tasks for 1984. He said: In the future the provincial government must concentrate its main efforts to promote reform of the economic setup, opening up to the world, and implementing the law on minority regional autonomy. We must apply reform as the motive force to stimulate the development of the economy and all social undertakings.

On the question of reform, he said: In the second half of this year, the provincial government is preparing to concentrate on reforming the economic setup in the urban areas. We should first carry out economic reforms in industry and communications, in commerce, and in Xining City. Other sectors and departments must step up investigation and study, explore ways of reform, produce plans, and undertake pilot projects.

The general demand in urban reforms is: We must totally change the situation whereby there is no difference whether enterprises are managed well or badly and whether the workers do much or little work. We must ensure that the enterprises do not eat out of the state's big pot of rice and that the workers do not eat out of the enterprises' big pot of rice.

Huang Jingbo said when speaking on expanding enterprise decision-making powers: At present there is an outstanding universal problem in state-owned industrial enterprises: They have no powers or ways of being responsible. In order to change this situation, certain enterprises must be handed down in a planned and prepared manner to autonomous prefectures, commissioner's offices, cities, and counties to manage. Certain administrative departments and bureaus in charge of the economy should be gradually built into economic entities that combine responsibilities, powers, and interests. The government departments in charge must streamline their administration and hand down powers to the enterprises, to ensure that the enterprises can enjoy full powers in production planning, capital utilization, labor and wage management, cadre appointment and dismissal, and structural setup. While enjoying decision-making powers, the enterprises should actively reform their leadership setup and institute the responsibility system for managers.
On the question of opening up to the world, Governor Huang Jingbo said: Opening up to the world includes opening up to Hong Kong, Macao, and foreign countries, and also to other provinces. Proceeding from the province's realities, we should open up to other provinces and to the special economic zones and coastal cities. We should use those places as windows to find out information of all kinds about conditions at home and abroad, use them as channels to export our products, and use them as bridges to attract foreign investment and import technology for improving the existing enterprises. We should establish various forms of economic and technological cooperation ties, and vigorously develop the province's natural and manpower resources. At the same time, we should encourage economic cooperation between different parts of the province. We advocate that the towns open up to the rural and pastoral areas, the pastoral areas open up to the rural areas, and the rural areas open up to the pastoral areas.

QINGHAI CYL COMMITTEE HOLDS MEETING ON IMPROVING WORK

HKL91358 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 18 Jun 84

[Text] According to QINGHAI RIBAO, at the stage of comparison and examination, with stress laid on the key point of creating a new situation and doing the league's work well, the members of the leading group of the Qinghai Provincial CYL Committee have seriously conducted comparison and examination. Focusing on the league's work, the leading group has discussed ways to conform to the reform, the new situation, and to the characteristics of young people. They have also put forward five measures for further doing well in the league's work:

First, we should enhance the revolutionary spirit, stride forward, and conform to the new situation of reform. In the league's work, we must be unwilling to lag behind and must strive for improvements. We must seriously analyze both the favorable and unfavorable factors, widen our field of vision, and act in a down-to-earth manner. We must create a new situation by using the new thinking and new methods, and by taking actions in a new way.

Second, we should strengthen the information work. The provincial CYL Committee should plan to establish an investigation institution as soon as possible, which will collect and study the new situation and new problems in various areas through various channels. We should also establish an information network for the provincial CYL's work.

Third, on the basis of thoroughly studying ways for various fronts, including the rural areas, pastoral areas, and industrial and communication enterprises, to conform to the new characteristics of reform, we should strive to make breakthroughs in the study of the league's work on various fronts and propose specific measures and plans for improving the work.

Fourth, we should, in connection with the four modernizations and the actual conditions of developing Qinghai, organize and lead the youth throughout the province to study scientific and technical progress and to receive education. The provincial CYL Committee must volunterially coordinate with the departments concerned, such as the education department and scientific and technological department, to keep the channels open for youth studying by themselves. They should try their best to create good study conditions for them.
Fifth, we should actively train CYL cadres at various levels and improve their ideological and professional standards. Together with the provision of education on the basic theory of Marxism-Leninism and on the CPC's operational knowledge, we should gradually form the cadres into a contingent that is able to tackle tough issues. We should first plan to give awards within the provincial CYL Committee for any investigation achievement. After we have gained experience in various work, we shall popularize it throughout the province. The provincial CYLC Committee Standing Committee must go down to the grassroots to handle actual work. It must make one or two analytical and suggestive reports, so as to guide and improve the league's work.

NINGXIA'S HEI BOLI SPEAKS ON USING FOREIGN CAPITAL

"HeiBoli's Speech at the Press Conference of Chinese and Foreign Reporters"

Ladies, gentlemen and comrades:

Today I am pleased to have the honor to announce to you that in late September this year an international meeting to discuss international economic and technological cooperation will be held in Yinchuan City, Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region.

This discussion meeting will be held under the guidance of our country's policy on economically opening up to the outside world, and we have already received permission for holding this meeting from the PRC Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade and from the regional people's government. On the principle of equality and mutual benefit, we will introduce from abroad advanced technology and equipment by means of developing joint ventures between China and other countries, cooperation in production, compensation trade and leasing equipment. This will not only facilitate the technological transformation of our enterprises and the development of the modernization, but will also provide foreign businessmen a fine investment and trade opportunity.

The Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region is situated in northwest China in the middle and upper valleys of the Huang He. It has an area of 66,400 square km and a population of nearly 4 million people, of whom one-third are of Hui nationality. It is China's major area where Hui nationality people live in compact communities. Its capital, Yinchuan City, is situated on the banks of the Huang He and at the foot of Helan Shan. It is an ancient city outside the Great Wall with fine scenery and is the political, economic and cultural center of the whole region.

Ningxia has fine scenery and many products and resources. The Yinchuan plain, an area irrigated by the Huang He, is richly endowed by nature. People generally say that "of all areas in the world, the Huang He makes Ningxia rich." On this plain is a vast stretch of fertile land, a good network of irrigation ditches, and favorable natural conditions for growing rice and breeding fish so that people can be sure of good harvests irregardless of floods or drought. The plain yields abundant rice, wheat, oil-bearing crops, beets, fruits and melons, and is a commodity grain base in the region. The southern mountainous area is suitable for the development of both forestry and animal husbandry. The 40 million mu of grassland in the east can be developed into promising natural grazing land. The fruits of Chinese wolfberry, licorice roots, stones from the Helan Shan, lamb's wool and the edible hairy weed are regarded as five "treasures" of red, yellow, blue, white and black colors long known throughout the world.

Ningxia has rich mineral resources and thus has great potential to tap in exploiting these resources. The major mineral resources are: coal, petroleum, gypsum, phosphorus, cement, limestone, sandstone for producing glass, clay and silica. At present our region's major industries are coal, electric power, chemicals, petroleum, metallurgy machine building, and the light textile industries. The region's gross industrial output value rose by more than 100 times over that at the initial period of the revolution and 26 times over that of the year the region was established. The energy industry has developed particularly quickly. Now in the region there are two large thermal power plants and the Huang He Qingtong Gorge hydroelectric power station. The total generating capacity of these plants is 508,000 kilowatts. The region's coal industry has already been formed into a relatively integrated system. The anthracite in the region, called "Taixi coal" and which is well known both at home and abroad, has a low sulfur, phosphorus and ash content and a high heat content. It is exported to over 10 European and Asian countries and regions and has been well received by customers. Ningxia's precision machine tool, instruments and meters, bearings, materials testing equipment, motors and general machinery industries have all developed to a certain extent and have a certain standing in the country. Its textiles, with pure wool jacquard blankets and woolen, cashmere and acrylic sweaters as representative products enjoy a relatively high reputation in world markets.

During the past few years Ningxia's foreign trade has developed relatively quickly. The number of joint venture enterprises with foreign and Hong Kong businessmen has continuously grown, and these enterprises have already achieved marked economic results. Recently, the region published a list of its first batch of 67 projects to utilize foreign capital and introduce technology from abroad. Of these projects, 7 are projects in the textile industry, 23 are in light industry, 21 are in the machine-building industry, 6 are in the electronics and instruments industries, 4 are in the chemical industry, 3 are in the pharmaceutical industry, 2 are in the metallurgical industry and 1 is in the service sector. The enterprises that we have listed for developing cooperation with foreign businessmen not only have been provided with fine conditions for investment, but also with relatively satisfactory conditions for cooperation. Diverse forms are allowed for carrying out cooperation.

Utilizing foreign capital and developing external economic and technological cooperative relations is a steadfast major policy of our country. Our region is now making efforts toward the direction of transforming the technology of our industry. We hope that through discussions with foreign businessmen, we will introduce from abroad advanced equipment and technology on the principle of equality and mutual benefit. We will continue to implement and apply a number of preferential policies in accordance with the relevant state regulations. These policies are: 1) We will examine and approve as quickly as possible the contracts for economic and technological cooperation projects that have been signed by the two parties; 2) We will exempt from customs duty and the unified industrial and commercial tax the machinery, equipment, spare parts and other materials and goods which are imported with the funds provided by the foreign partners of joint ventures between foreigners and us; 3) We will lengthen the period of income tax exemptions for joint ventures between foreigners and us. Originally, all income tax was exempted in the first year and half exempted in the second and third years. Now we have stipulated that all income tax will be exempted in the first and second years and half exempted in the third, fourth and fifth years; 4) We encourage enterprises run by joint capital and other projects that utilize foreign capital to market their products abroad, but at the same time we will also allow them to market a part of their products on the domestic market; 5) Except for products on which there is a state export restriction, all products exported by enterprises run by joint capital are exempted from industrial and commercial taxes and customs duties; 6) We welcome foreign businessmen to set up on a trial basis enterprises of exclusively foreign capital; and 7) In accordance with the relevant state regulations, we will give special preferential treatment to Overseas Chinese and Hong Kong and Macao compatriots who invest in our country.

Although Ningxia is situated in China's hinterland, the Baotou-Lanzhou railway, which runs across Ningxia, and the Beijing-Yinchuan-Lanzhou and Yinchuan-Xian air routes provide convenient passenger and cargo transport for businessmen from abroad. We sincerely welcome businessmen and friends in the economic, financial and commercial circles from countries throughout the world to come to Ningxia to discuss business, invest, visit scenic spots in the region, and develop scientific and technological exchanges. We hope that they make new progress in so doing.
XINJIANG ARMED POLICE FORCE HOLDS POLITICAL WORK CONFERENCE

HK291110 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 28 Jun 84

[Text] Tan Shanhe, political commissar of the Urumqi Military Region, and Amudong Niyazi, standing committee member of the regional CPC committee, spoke yesterday afternoon at the first political work conference of the Xinjiang Armed Police Force. They urged the armed police force throughout the region to conscientiously implement the spirit of the NPC and the spirit of the 3d session of the 6th regional people's congress. They urged them to base themselves on reform [words indistinct] so as to further improve the political quality and the mental attitude of the fighters, as well as the fighting capacity of the force.

In their speeches they pointed out that since its establishment, the Xinjiang Armed Police Force has made remarkable achievements in various operations and tasks, including internal and border security and fire fighting. They have made contributions in safeguarding the region's political situation of stability and unity, in safeguarding the region's economic construction, and in consolidating the border defense in northwest China.

Tan Shanhe said in his speech: Strengthening political work will be the fine tradition of our party and the region in the foreseeable future. Political work is party work in the army. He said that various units of the Xinjiang Armed Police Force are spread throughout the region. They are very scattered, their working conditions are harsh, and their tasks are arduous. Therefore, we must place the focal point of political work on the grassroots. The Xinjiang Armed Police Force's CPC committees and political organizations at various levels must go down to the grassroots units, must go deep into the realities of life, and must greatly promote the trend of studying. They must seriously study the new situation, new characteristics, and new problems emerging in grassroots units when carrying out political work. They must strive to do well in the political work of the army.

Amudong Niyazi said in his speech: The tasks shouldered by the Xinjiang Armed Police Force are of a strong policy, legal and disciplinary nature. But we must integrate such work with party rectification and rectify the regional armed police force. We must set high demands on the force, give them systematic education, set rigid rules, train them hard, and strictly enforce discipline. Through education we must help the fighters to establish firmly and at a higher level the concept of fighting against the enemy, the legal concept, the sense of organization, and the thinking of always having the interests of the masses in mind. This is an armed police force which is loyal to the party and to the people and which has a strong fighting capacity. It is also an armed police force which has made greater achievements in safeguarding the region's economic structural reform and for smooth progress in the work of opening to the outside world.

The first political work conference of Xinjiang Armed Police Force was held in Urumqi from 20 to 27 June. Qi Guang, director of the regional public security bureau, made a summary report.

[Text] In order to further implement the policies toward intellectuals, to encourage staff members and workers of all nationalities to keep their minds on their work in border areas for a long time, and to speed up the region's economic and cultural construction, the regional CPC committee and the regional people's government recently formulated a regulation on allowing floating wages for intellectuals and staff members and workers in border areas, giving subsidies to intellectuals, and giving subsidies for working in border areas for a fixed number of years.

The regulation provides:

In the areas of the fourth category of the region, the wages of postgraduates, graduates of universities and secondary vocational schools, technicians, and professional and technical cadres with technical titles equivalent to the level of a technician and above; and of middle and primary school teachers who have engaged in educational work for 10 years, can be floated upward one grade higher than their present wages. Later, if they have worked in Xinjiang for 5 consecutive years, their wages will be changed to fixed wages. If they continue to work in Xinjiang, their wages can be further floated upward one grade higher.

In the areas of the third category, the wages of postgraduates, graduates of universities and secondary vocational schools, technicians, and professional and technical cadres with technical titles equivalent to the level of a technician and above; and of middle and primary school teachers who have engaged in educational work for 12 years, can be floated upward one grade higher than their present wages. Later, if they have worked in Xinjiang for 6 consecutive years, their wages will be changed to fixed wages. If they continue to work in Xinjiang, their wages can be further floated one grade higher.

In the areas of the first and second categories, the wages of postgraduates, graduates of universities and secondary vocational schools, technicians, and professional and technical cadres with technical titles equivalent to the level of a technician and above, who work in units below the county level, excluding the county level; and of middle and primary school teachers who have engaged in educational work for 15 years, can be floated upward one grade higher than their present wages. Later, if they have worked in Xinjiang for 8 consecutive years, their wages will be changed to fixed wages. If they continue to work in Xinjiang, their wages can be further floated upward one grade higher.

In the areas of the first and second categories, the wages of postgraduates, assistant engineers, and professional and technical cadres with technical titles equivalent to the level of an assistant engineer and above, who work in units above the county level, including the country level; of graduates of universities and colleges who have worked for 1 year; of graduates of secondary vocational schools who have worked for 3 years; of professional and technical cadres who have worked for 15 years and have acquired the title of a technician or equivalent technical title; and of middle and primary school teachers who have engaged in educational work for 15 years, can be floated upward one grade higher than their present wages. Later, if they have worked in Xinjiang for 8 consecutive years, their wages will be changed to fixed wages. If they continue to work in Xinjiang, their wages can be further floated one grade higher.

The wages of cadres from other counties who have actually worked in Xinjiang for 25 years can be floated upward one grade higher than their present wages. Later, if they have worked in Xinjiang for 8 consecutive years, their wages will be changed to fixed wages. The wages of retired cadres who had actually working in Xinjiang for 25 years prior to their retirement, can be floated upward one grade higher and their increased wages will be included in their pensions.

In the period of implementing the system of floating wages, the state regulations on the readjustment of wages and the promotion of grades are not affected.

If graduates of universities and secondary vocational schools and professional and technical cadres who have acquired the title of a technician or equivalent technical titles and above have worked in Xinjiang for 15 years, they will be given intellectual subsidies according to different areas. In the areas of the fourth category, they will each be given subsidies of 25 yuan a month. In the areas of the third category, they will each be given subsidies of 20 yuan a month. In the areas of the second category, they will each be given subsidies of 15 yuan a month. In the areas of the first category, they will each be given subsidies of 10 yuan a month. Intellectuals of all nationalities are encouraged to work in basic levels in distant border areas.

Subsidies will be given to state staff members and workers who work in Xinjiang for a fixed number of years. A state staff member or a worker who has worked in Xinjiang for 1 year but less than 5 years, will be given 2 yuan a month. If he has worked for 5 years, he will be given 3 yuan a month. Later, for each additional 5 years worked, his subsidies will increase by 3 yuan. When a staff member or a worker retires, the subsidies for working in border areas for a fixed number of years which he originally enjoyed, can be included in their pensions.
The light of the actual situation of the enterprises and in accordance with the State Council's relevant regulations on expanding decisionmaking power, state enterprises and institutions whose management has been shifted to management by enterprises can formulate regulations and can enforce them subject to the approval of departments concerned.

XINJIANG TO ACCELERATE ENTERPRISE CONSOLIDATION

HK280826 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 27 Jun 84

[Text] This morning, the regional people's government held a plenary session which resolved to accelerate the pace of enterprise consolidation so as to conform to the requirements of reform. Ismail Amat, chairman of the regional government, presided over the session and made a speech. Tuohuti Shabier, vice chairman of the regional government, made a speech on how to accelerate the pace of enterprise consolidation.

In this speech, Tuohuti Shabier urged all departments to further grasp well the work of readjusting the enterprises' leading groups, to continue to eliminate the leftist influence, to emancipate their minds, and to select boldly innovative cadres among the intellectuals and assign them important tasks. He also urged the departments to further perfect and implement the economic responsibility system within the enterprises, and to establish the duty responsibility system among the workers and the professional economic responsibility system within the enterprises' departments in charge of energy saving. Enterprises which have undergone consolidation and passed the examination of acceptance must by no means stop making further improvement. The responsible departments must carry out reexamination. If an enterprise if found to have serious problems in the course of reexamination, the department should recall the certificate of examination and the enterprises should undergo a further consolidation. Enterprises which have passed the examination, particularly the large and medium-sized major enterprises, must switch their focal point to technological progress and modernization of management, and move toward a loftier goal.

SHAANXI REPORTS POPULATION COMPOSITION CHANGES

HK300857 Xian SHAANXI RIBAO in Chinese 20 Jun 84 p 1

[Report by special correspondent Liang Naizhong [2733 0035 0022]: "Prominent Changes Have Taken Place in the Composition of Our Province's Population"]

[Text] Because our province has continued to deepen the development of its work related to family planning since the 1970's, there has been a prominent shift in the composition of our province's population:

1. The population growth has tended to be steady. In 1964, there were more than 830,000 births; but in the years after the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CPC Committee, the annual number of births averaged 470,000, and the natural rate of population increase was 9.84 per thousand. In the period since 1972, the province reduced the total number of births by 2.98 million.

2. The composition of the population has changed. The percentage of children below the age of 9 has dropped from 28.5 percent in 1972 to 19.7 percent in 1982. This has not only reduced the burdens on our state, collectives and families, but also facilitates controlling the population growth in the future.

3. People's views on giving birth to children have also changed greatly and an increasingly large number of people have accepted the views on late marriage, giving birth to children late, giving birth to fewer children and taking better care of the children born. Women married above the age of 20 accounted for 14 percent of the married women in 1950, but by 1980, this percentage rose to 93.6 percent and more than 50 percent of the women married were above age 23. Throughout the province about 600,000 couples have been issued single-child certificates.

4. Families have gradually become smaller. The old tradition of "the more children, the greater happiness" and "four generations of family members living together" is collapsing. The number of families consisting of only two generations of people has become increasingly large. In 1964, the average number of members in families in our province was 4.87; but in 1982 it was only 4.5. In the new urban areas in Xian City, it has dropped to 3.3
The change in the composition of our province's population has already played a satisfactory role in our economic and social development. In the past 12 years 2.98 million less babies were born. This meant the conservation of over 5 billion jin of foodgrain and over 2.2 billion yuan in expenditures for bringing up children. At the initial period of liberation, it took 6 years to reduce our province's per capita area of farmland by one mu, but after 1966 it took 15 years to do so.

SHAANXI CIRCULAR ON STUDYING ZHAO ZIYANG REPORT

HK090538 Xian Shaanxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 0330 GMT 9 Jun 84

[Text] The Shaanxi Provincial CPC Committee issued a circular on 7 June demanding that the party committees at all levels proceed from reality and assign some time to seriously study Premier Zhao Ziyang's government work report and Chairman Deng Yingchao's speech at the second session of the sixth CPPCC.

The circular stressed: On the basis of carefully reading the documents and appreciating their spirit, it is necessary, in close connection with the reality of thinking and work, to clearly understand that it is essential to carry out reforms in order to continue to press forward economic construction. Reform is the demand of the age and the essential way for vigorously developing the economy. In future economic work, we must focus on grasping reforms of the setup and on opening up to the world. These are two major affairs. We must implement all the reform measures proposed in the report.

While consolidating and developing the fruits of rural reforms, we must speed up the pace of urban reform. At present, the key topic in reforming the urban economic setup is to totally change the situation whereby no distinction is made between good and poor management and between great and little effort by workers in the enterprises. We must ensure that the enterprises do not eat out of the state's big pot and the workers do not eat out of the enterprises' big pot, and better mobilize the enthusiasm of the enterprises and the workers.

The circular demanded: In connection with party rectification we must, through education, eliminate leftist ideological influence, shake off the bindings of habitual forces and customary concepts, further emancipate our minds, broaden our vision, and ensure that reform forges ahead in big strides and a new situation is created in opening up to the world.

The leaders at all levels must stand in the forefront of and be promoters of reform. They must listen to the masses' calls for reform, protect their enthusiasm for reform and their pioneering spirit, wholeheartedly support the reformers and help them to clear away obstacles, overcome difficulties, and better clear the way to forge ahead.
All sectors and trades must do their work well in the spirit of being keen to carry out reforms. All prefectures, cities, and counties, and the provincial departments must compare and examine their work in light of reality, propose specific measures for reform, carry out all reforms in an active and measured way, and strive to complete all the tasks for this year.

The circular pointed out: We must further implement the party's policies, especially those on intellectuals. We must actively support the activities of the democratic parties and give full play to the important role of democratic parties and non-party figures in building the four modernizations.

The circular stressed in conclusion: This study must be focused on the leading cadres at all levels. At the same time, we must organize study for the other cadres and the masses. We must adopt a variety of ways to vigorously publicize reforms and mobilize the workers, peasants, and intellectuals to be concerned for reform and actively take part in it, and score outstanding results in reform to greet the 35th anniversary of the founding of the state.
QINGHAI: HUANG JINGBO ON EFFICIENCY, MINORITY ISSUES

HK020557 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 1 Jul 84

[Excerpts] In his government work report delivered at the second session of the sixth provincial people's congress, Qinghai Governor Huang Jingbo stressed: We must summon up determination to solve the problem of the work in the administrative organs failing to meet the needs of reform. He said: There has been a great improvement in all work as a result of structural reform. However, procrastination, buck-passing, and haggling over trifles remain an outstanding problem at present. Unless this problem is solved, it will affect reform and the effort to open up to the world. The new organs must have a new appearance, and the new leadership groups must have new work style. The provincial government therefore demands that during July all areas and departments carry out a thorough review of the rules, regulations, systems, and methods they issued in the past, and put forward views on dealing with those that do no accord with the spirit of reform and the law on autonomy for nationality regions.

Governor Huang Jingbo put forward a number of tasks to be currently done in implementing the law on autonomy for nationality regions. It is necessary to further relax the policies and adopt flexible measures in promoting economic and social undertakings in minority regions. The provincial CPC committee recently studied questions of economic development in Yushu and Guoluo autonomous prefectures, and sent a report to the CPC Central Committee and State Council. The CPC Central Committee and State Council attached very great importance to this and issued a six-point decision, as follows:

1. Abolish the procurement quotas for meat livestock and for cattle and sheep hides. With regard to wool, the amount delivered last year should be regarded as the base figure; the delivery quota for Yushu and Guoluo prefectures is to be cut by 30 percent, and for other autonomous prefectures by 20 percent.

2. Yushu and Guoluo autonomous prefectures will be exempt from agricultural and animal husbandry tax for the next few years.

3. These two autonomous prefectures will have their charges for energy and communications waived. Road building there will be covered by the state plan.

4. Suitably relax the capital construction management jurisdiction in minority regions. Construction carried out by the autonomous prefectures and counties using capital they have raised themselves need not be included in the statistics and can also be exempt from building tax.

5. Readjust the orientation for the use of capital in supporting undeveloped regions. This capital should mainly be used in developing production and solving difficulties in the masses' daily life.

6. Seven million yuan in special funds are being allocated to the province for implementing the policies on the united front and religion, and 8 million yuan are being allocated as relief funds for production and daily life in (Langxian) and Banma counties.

Governor Huang Jingbo stressed: There is bound to be fierce competition after encouraging competition between enterprises and solving the problem of the two big pots of rice. There will be competition between state-owned, collective, and individual enterprises, between urban and rural areas, between different trades, and between enterprises. There can be no vitality without competition. We cannot protect the backward. We must advocate and encourage competition.

He said: In the artillery battle against Vietnamese troops, the army units taking part in the battle, the armed police, the vast numbers of militia members, and the personnel supporting the frontline carried forward the spirit of patriotism and revolutionary heroism, resolutely carried out orders, and accomplished the fighting tasks with resource and courage, in unity and cooperation, and with the spirit of continuous fighting. The current meeting is aimed at publicizing the great victory gained in the battle, commending the heroic collectives and model figures, launching a drive to learn from the heroic and model personnel, and making contributions to the defense of the motherland and the construction of the border area.

Shan Yinchang, deputy political commissar of the Guangzhou Military Region, then spoke at the meeting. He called on the army units and militia members to attach importance to the summing up and application of the experience gained in the battle in order to guide the building of the army units and militia members, to do a good job in education and training, to strengthen the building at the grassroots level, to raise combat effectiveness in an all-round way, and to strive to open up a new situation in the building of army units and militiamen.

Comrade Wang Zhuguang spoke at the meeting on behalf of the regional CPC committee and people's government. He said: The victory of the artillery battle is a great honor to the army units taking part in the battle, the armed police, and the militiamen. It is also a great honor to the people of all nationalities in Guangxi. In order to fulfill the task of struggle in the border area in a more satisfactory way, the border area and the frontier guards should do a better job of jointly building civilized villages and defending our territory. It is necessary to regard the implementation of army-civilian joint defense and the fulfillment of the task of fighting against the enemy as an important criterion for judging the achievements in jointly building civilized villages. On behalf of the regional CPC committee and people's government, he called on the people throughout the region to learn from the heroic collectives and personnel who had performed meritorious deeds in the artillery battle by their noble qualities of loving the motherland, of being loyal to the people, and of bravely giving their lives for the country, and to make contributions to the cause of building and defending the border area and winning fresh victories in defending the border area and resisting the enemy.

Nanjing Military Region Supports Open-Door Plan

OW21321 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 19 Jun 84

[Text] The Nanjing Military Region CPC Committee's Standing Committee members and advisers made a special study and discussion of the government work report from 10 to 14 June, with special reference to the reality of army building.

Under the guidelines of Circular No 8 of the Central Commission for Guiding Party Rectification and with reference to the central task of how to creatively implement the government work report, they discussed in particular the questions of how to continue creating a new situation in army work and how to support local economic construction.

They pointed out that state construction and army building are not in conflict. Only when state construction is successfully carried out can army building be pushed forward. The central authorities have decided to open five coastal cities in the Nanjing area to the outside world. Comrades in the army have an unshirkable duty to support the opening of these cities.

The Nanjing Military Region CPC Committee has decided to complete the following three tasks first:

1. Select the Shanghai Garrison District as a pilot area for educating cadres and fighters in the open-door policy and then popularize the education throughout the military region to enable all cadres and fighters to correctly understand the party's open-door policy.

2. Give vigorous manpower and material support to the construction of cities designated for opening to the outside world, especially to the construction of a number of key projects in the areas. When such support affects the interests of the army, the army should consider the question in the interest of the overall situation.

3. Learn from the construction experience of the opened area and work hard to create a new situation in army work.

HEBEI'S RETIRED SOLDIERS PROMOTE RURAL ECONOMY

OW240212 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 2230 GMT 22 Jun 84

By April this year, more than 1,500 retired servicemen began to run specialized households in Yuanshi County, accounting for about 12 percent of the total number of specialized households in the county. Of the 430 specialized households in commercial transport in the county, one-third were run by retired servicemen.

Retired servicemen in the county were the first to earn incomes of more than 10,000 yuan, establish truck-repair combines, set up the special trade in truck transportation, develop fungus production and solve the problems in marketing corn.

The investigative report says: The retired dual-purpose personnel in Yuanshi County are generally equipped with five qualifications.

1. They have a good educational and technical background. Most of them have had senior middle school education and are skilled in fishbreeding, farming, repair of transportation.

2. They have wide knowledge and are good at operations. (Li Zhanhai), the first to earn more than 10,000 yuan in the county, began to engage in chicken-raising when he noticed a shortage in egg supplies in 1981. Later, he bought a truck to engage in commercial transport after his chicken farm had developed in scale. When hundreds of special households in commercial transport had sprung in the county, he began to make preparations for setting up a cannery with an estimated daily output of 3 metric tons by using the many locally produced fruits.

3. They pay attention to efficiency and have good managerial skills. (Zhang Fengming) and three other retired servicemen in (Lanzuo) Township set up a truck-repair combine patterned after the army's management and education procedures and laid down a set of operation and management rules. The combine has good discipline and high work efficiency. In less than a year it made a profit of more than 10,000 yuan.

4. They know policy and abide by the law.

5. They have lofty style and high political consciousness.

(Zhao Wenqin), secretary of the Yuanshi County Party Committee, has praised these retired servicemen as propagandists for the party's policies, models in developing commodity production, and frontrunners in achieving prosperity through hard work.

JIEFANGJUN BAO appends an editor's note recommending to its readers this investigative report prepared by the departments concerned under the PLA General Political Department and the Shijiazhuang Military Subdistrict.

HENAN RESERVE OFFICER TRAINING--Zhengzhou, 25 Jun (XINHUA)--Over 30 reserve cadres at divisional and regimental level are currently receiving—for a certain period—strict training in military command, political education and logistics work in the Henan Provincial Military District. Since the promulgation of the new military service law, the Henan Provincial Military District has conducted such training for the first time for officers at divisional and regimental level of the reserve division formed last year. On the morning of 14 June, 31 local cadres gladly put on brand-new army uniforms at an auditorium in Zhengzhou city. Then, they began to systematically study military theory, knowledge on arms, services, foreign armies, combat organization and operations—more than 10 subjects leaders of the division and cadres of organs have to master. Relevant arrangements were also made for training these cadres in both political and logistics work. All the reserve officers were glad to have this opportunity to participate in the training. Bai Xianmin, deputy commander of the reserve division, and vice mayor of Kaifeng City, said: "We have not engaged in military work for many years now. We must make full use of this opportunity. We must set strict demands on ourselves, receive this exacting training, and fulfill all training programs to a high standard."

PRC CADRE SYSTEM REFORM SAID TO FACE OBSTACLES

Hong Kong CHENG MING [CONTENDING] in Chinese No 79, May 84 pp 59-61

[Article by Li Feng [2621 2800]: "Obstacles to Reform of Cadre System on Mainland"]

[Text] Recently, JENMIN JIHPAO published one commentator's article after another criticizing "certain cadres" for resisting the decisions of the central authorities and for blocking the implementation of the new cadre policy and the progress of structural readjustment. Why are so many obstacles being put up? JENMIN JIHPAO casually reduces the causes to the old conventions and conservative ideas of certain party committees and personnel departments. However, from this writer's contacts and understanding of the situation, the causes are more complex than the official analysis indicates.

Below I might as well make a specific analysis of the CPC cadre situation.

Why Are Intellectuals Always Rejected?

The CPC cadre ranks were basically established in the period of the ultraleft line; the main origins of the cadres were officers and soldiers transferred from the armed forces to the localities and "upstarts" who had taken part in previous political movements. In general, the entire cadre ranks were quite deeply affected by the ultraleft ideology. What they were familiar with was class struggle and continuing revolution, that is to say, they regarded it as their duty to "eat political food." But when it came to production management and specialized knowledge, they were often utterly ignorant. Now, after the focus of work has truly been shifted onto the track of economic construction, they unavoidably show that they are at a loss as to what to do and make fools of themselves.

In Shanghai, technicians at a factory, after consulting the experience of foreign countries, successfully designed a set of new equipment that, in concert with new technological processes, doubled and redoubled the production rate. This drew the attention of the relevant state department and the factory was given a sizable bonus. When the factory leaders were distributing the bonus, after various deductions were made to cadres with connections and who got preferential treatment according to precedent, there was just enough to give each staff member and worker 30 yuan, but it was still necessary for some of the people in one department to be paid 7 yuan less per person. In that case, who should get less? After each leader stuck to his own position, the leaders finally decided: the technicians should get less! The reason was: "A slight success will make intellectuals cocky, and rather than cherishing them organizationally, inoculations must be given to prevent them from becoming arrogant and complacent." This was truly laughable! But the intellectuals were not laughing. They said: "This is a common occurrence, so what is there to smile about? If the fast cows are flogged, naturally they will become lazy cows." They grumbled: If one doesn't work, there is one fault—low enthusiasm; but the more one works, the more problems there are and the more serious the faults!

Faced with the intellectuals, many veteran cadres of enterprises were also full of grievances. They grumbled: "We are number-one big fools. We listened to the party, followed the party and engaged in revolution for several decades. Now in our decline we have neither learning nor skill, and we stand at a latrine pit but cannot empty our bowels!" But who is to blame for this? Seemingly, we cannot put the sole blame on them, because nonprofessionals and professionals are made, not borne. For more than 30 years they could have studied and become cadres proficient in professional work. It is a pity that in their youthful period of promise, they wasted their golden opportunity in artificial political class struggle; now, under the new circumstances, they are already approaching old age.

"The King of Ch'u loved 'slender waists'—beauties—so his countrymen died of hunger; the King of Wu loved swordsmen so his countrymen had many scars." This is far more than one generation's tragedy! Who should be held responsible?

The More Power the More Selfishness

On 22 March, JENMIN JIHPAO published a Commentator's article entitled "Select People in the Prime of Life To Shoulder Heavy Burdens in Enterprises." On 30 March, it published an article entitled "We Cannot Delay!" in which the commentator cited the leading cadre of the central authorities: "We must be determined to have the number-one and number-two men in the party committees be people in the prime of life with specialized knowledge and a pathbreaking spirit. The keys are the number-one and number-two men, and if they are not like this it will be very difficult to create a new situation." The fact that this cadre reform work has been carried out for many years but that warnings must still be raised shows that the work has been very successful. Wherein lies the problem? To this writer's knowledge, the main problem stems from the fact that some cadres feign compliance but are loath to part with authority. Why are the veteran cadres unwilling to retire?

Originally, among these veteran cadres there were genuine feelings of pain or embarrassment that were hard to mention. Today there are still totalitarian social structures where to have authority is to have everything—authority is truth, authority is advantage. Literary and art works from the mainland portray the situation thus: A person who has held power "... no longer can promote and take care of anyone, is no longer useful and therefore removed from the namelist of human relationships." In these years, the high-sounding talk about ideals, responsibility, unselfishness, sacrifice of one's interest for the sake of others and wholeheartedness has been overdone, with the result that they have changed into their opposite and, therefore, society has become extremely callous, pragmatic, snobbish and philistine. Relationships between people have turned into relationships between political commodities, and one's social value and the degree of respect accorded him by others are decided by his possessions and what he can exchange or by the quality and quantity of his power. These veteran cadres who are on the verge of losing their power, as well as their family members, are naturally very sensitive about this question.

They not only worry about losing all sorts of privileges in politics and life but also worry about changes in the entire moral outlook in society of themselves as individuals and their families. Cadres who fairly early surrendered their power have already had a taste of the inconstancy of human relationships—when they were in power their offices were like markets to which people came in an endless stream; after leaving office it is like the case of "the weeping empress at the Gate of Harmony: the vermilion footsteps have vanished without a trace." And like ordinary people, they seek help in "swallowing the three-foot sword," and thus they are overcome with grief and their cries of discontent are quite loud. This sort of thing makes veteran cadres who still have real power more alert, and they talk over proper conditions, thinking that "If you don't see the hare, don't release the hawk." After solving one relevant problem after another, they slowly consider how to let go of their power so as to avoid regrets. Their considerations include putting their own sons and daughters, or a handful of trusted followers, into positions of real power, so as to provide for a rainy day in the future. This is one of the reasons that some units have had to repeatedly readjust their structures.

Of course, these plans and methods do not deceive the common people, and therefore people make the comment: "The bigger the official, the more selfish he is." Isn't this related to social reality as well as to the social system?

The Heavy Burden on Cadres Left by History

On the mainland there is a widely circulated story: A certain veteran cadre of noble character and high prestige, who visited Shen-chen and various special economic zones for the first time, on return said with bitter tears: "Chairman Mao died some years ago, and the country has turned into this shape. If this process goes on, what will be the difference between it and the old society?" To insist on measuring present reality with yardsticks from the past definitely describes some veteran cadres who have a fairly strong trace of "idealism." In their view, the entire significance of the lives of the revolutionary martyrs who were bled white and of the many people who have struggled all their lives for the cause of revolution, has been negated.

What is very strange is: Why do these people, who probably regard the cause of mankind's liberation as their own duty, turn a blind eye and a deaf ear to the disasters repeatedly created by the ultraleft line and, on the contrary, carry on like this over the meager advantages obtained by the common people? This should be blamed on Mao Tse-tung's longtime hoodwinking of the cadres. In September 1962 at the 8th Plenary Session of the 10th CPC Central Committee, Mao said: "This country of ours could still turn into its opposite, and if so, no matter. After the negation of a negation there can still be a turning revisionism, then although its opposite may be called socialism, in fact it will be capitalism. Our grandchildren will certainly rebel and overthrow their elders because of the dissatisfaction of the masses. Therefore, from now on, we must stress class struggle year after year, month after month, day after day, when plenary sessions are held, when meetings of party representatives are held, stressing it whenever a meeting is held, so that we will have a sober understanding of this problem." Afterward, on various occasions Mao many times talked like this. We certainly must not underestimate the effect on cadres of Mao Tse-tung's long-term inculcation of ultraleft ideology under the slogans of "prevent capitalist restoration" and "combat and prevent revisionism."

The "Philosophical Poverty" of the Pragmatists

During the party consolidation campaign, it is said that some cadres openly put forward these questions: The new policy politically eliminates class lines, economically opens things up, and in ideology and culture it peacefully coexists with the decadent and moribund bourgeois influences, so how will we be able to preserve the just, clear-cut class nature of the proletariat? How are we to preserve the purity of the revolutionary ranks? How are we to insure that the political color of the proletariat's state power will never change? There are always a few people who will reserve their opinions and refuse to be convinced. When traveling about the country, on many occasions one often hears similar talk from ordinary state cadres and armed forces cadres. They also feel perplexed.

Currently, one serious defect among CPC pragmatists is that their theory lags far behind their practice. Perhaps they think that the key is first to achieve successes and then, after theoretical work, sum things up. The result is that in the current big reform, realistic theoreticians have still failed to devise a systematic ideological theory that would forcefully explain the variety of contradictions existing between the "four upholds" and the current policy as well as in social phenomena. They can only, under the slogan "unity must be maintained with the Party Central Committee," forcibly pursue their policy by means of "organizational discipline" from top to bottom. This serves only to enable the ultraleftists to occupy a superior position with respect to "orthodox" Marxism-Leninism.

Moreover, the present leadership of the CPC still stifles the scholarly exploration of the "orthodox" theory, enabling the ultraleftists, relying on "orthodox" theory, to call to account the realists in an overbearing, confident and forceful manner.

Therefore, we can say that in the current reform, if the "philosophical poverty" of the pragmatists is not changed in good time, there is bound to be one obstacle after another in the reform, and this has become a big secret worry.
"Buying-out Policy" Produces Temporary Effects

Currently, the powerholders in Peking are a batch of old political hands. The reason that the veteran cadres who are unwilling to hand over power are secure in their knowledge that they have strong backing and dare to resist the Central Committee's policy is that they still have real power, and thus the authorities have no choice but to adopt a quite lenient "buying-out policy" of compromise and concession.

Most of the middle- and lower-level cadres are of peasant origin, and in the initial period after obtaining political power they already had the idea of "30 mu of land, one ox, a wife, children and the warmer end of the k'ang [a heatable brick bed]." They fully utilize this weak point in the "buying-out policy." Focusing on the variety of misgivings by cadres about their life after retirement, the policymakers in Peking have thought of as many ways as possible to placate and give consideration to them. Not only will the veteran cadres after retirement or separation retain many privileges of a comforting nature, but also some provinces and cities have begun to set up "veteran cadre bureaus," which are specially responsible for solving all sorts of problems before and after retirement. The majority of the veteran cadres have already accepted these conditions. As for the minority of cadres who are firm in their unwillingness to hand over power, this problem is solved by stipulating that leading cadres at the provincial and city levels be under the age of 60. Consequently, as long as there is no sudden, unexpected change, the game is as good as lost for the opposition faction, and by the strategem of "persuading one's generals to give up their troops during a grand feast" the outcome is a foregone conclusion.

Gradual Change in Cadre Standards

The "three modernizations" policy for cadres on the mainland, "making them younger in average age, better educated and professionally more competent," is generally considered by public opinion to be correct, but China has always had a special "national condition," namely, what the higher-ups say and what their subordinates do are often two different things; how the subordinates do things is of decisive significance. When specifically executing a policy, the common people normally find a "policy" closer to reality.

An oral summation of the situation, which is currently in wide circulation, is: "Age is a treasure, a record of formal schooling is indispensable, political integrity and talent are taken into consideration, but connections are most important." That is to say, actual work capability is not the most important qualification; a penetrating understanding of the affairs of human life, experience in the ways of the world, an ability to handle affairs smoothly and evasively and smoothness and slickness in establishing social relations are the decisive qualifications. However, as compared with the previous qualification for promotion to cadre, namely, that the candidate must "have a clean family record for three generations, have suffered bitterly and nursed deep hatred, have a clear-cut attitude, take a firm stand and be absolutely illiterate," this is definite progress. According to the requirements, the new generation of intellectuals and students who have completed their studies abroad and returned to China will in the future be able to join the ranks of basic-level cadres. This is, in the final analysis, a good thing for effecting a basic improvement in the quality of the cadre ranks.

However, it is still a question whether the younger people who newly rise to power will be able to remain uncorrupted by power, be able to play their role under the constraints of relationships and be able to find the path of technological revolution in the present social structure.

RUMOR OF WEI JINGSHENG'S MENTAL ILLNESS CONFIRMED

Hong Kong CHENG MING [CONTENDING] in Chinese No 79, May 84 p 40

(Article by Sihn Mung (4458 0285): "Wei Ching-sheng Contracts Mental Illness"

[Text] Wei Ching-sheng, China's famous fighter for democracy, has contracted schizophrenia in prison.

The news of Wei Ching-sheng's abnormality had long been rumored in Peking. Now it has been confirmed by a close friend of Wei's.

Long ago Wei Ching-sheng had once received treatment in the Prisoners' Ward of Peking's Fu-hsing Hospital. He was in a trance, his eyes stared blankly and he did not recognize his acquaintances. When he was taken for the second time to this hospital for treatment, his condition became more serious and he went into a coma.

The Prisoners' Ward of Fu-hsing Hospital specializes in handling the cases of famous prisoners. Chiang Ch'ing and Chang Ch'un-ch'iao have received treatment in this place.

Wei Ching-sheng was arrested on 29 March 1979. Afterward, on a trumped-up charge of "selling military intelligence" he was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Several days before his arrest, Wei had been shadowed by the Peking Public Security Bureau. At that time he took the attitude of a "martyr" in preparing to be arrested. From a look at his firm will and his mental preparation before his arrest, it was very unlikely that he would become insane because of a "mental upset."

Liu Ch'ing [0491 7230], chief editor of PEI-CHING CHIH CH'UN [PEKING SPRING] and the author of "Notes from Prison," encountered Wei Ching-sheng by chance in the Pan-pu Bridge Detention Center. Wei turned a blind eye to this intimate friend, and Liu Ch'ing felt that this was very strange and thought that Wei Ching-sheng could be mentally abnormal.

Is this the tragedy of a man, or the tragedy of a nation?
