[Text] Hanoi, 11 Oct (VNA)—Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong today sent his warmest greetings to the 11th conference of the Presidium of the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Organization (AAPSO) which is being held in Tashkent.

The message says: "This conference is being held on the 25th anniversary of the founding of the A.A.P.S.O. and the 60th anniversary of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. It is taking place at a time when the struggle of the world's people against the extremely reactionary and warlike policy of U.S. imperialism and the other imperialist and reactionary forces is developing more widely than ever. That is why, the conference is of very important significance to the political life of the Afro-Asian people and has an active impact on the struggle for peace and happiness of the peoples in this region and throughout the world.

"Over the past 25 years, the A.A.P.S.O. has made big contributions to the cause of liberation and national independence, for peace, security and sovereignty of the Asian and African countries against imperialism, colonialism and neo-colonialism, Zionism, apartheid and other international reactionary forces.

"In this struggle, the A.A.P.S.O. will certainly bring into full play its important role to win many and still great successes.

"With that confidence, the people and government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam once again warmly welcome and fully support the peace programme for the 1980's of the Soviet Union and the constructive peace initiatives put forward by President L. I. Brezhnev for ensuring a stable peace for the whole mankind.

"We sincerely thank the A.A.P.S.O., the Asian and African peoples and the freedom peace- and justice-loving forces in the whole world for strongly supporting our anti-U.S. resistance war, for national salvation in the past, and our present struggle to build and defend our fatherland against Chinese expansionism and hegemonism in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces."
"The Socialist Republic of Vietnam pledges to do its best for peace, national independence and cooperation between the Asian and African countries and all other nations. It resolutely opposes the schemes and policy of U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces for conducting the arms race, stepped up the production and stockpiling of nuclear weapons in an attempt to push mankind into a nuclear holocaust.

PARTY CONGRESS RESOLUTION STUDIED, IMPLEMENTED IN BASIC ORGANIZATIONS

Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 7 Sep 82 p 3

[Article by Nghiem Thanh: "Quang Ninh Extends Political Activities to Basic Party Organizations"]

[Text] The Quang Ninh Provincial Party Committee Standing Committee has been concentrating on leading basic party organizations to start a political activity campaign to study and implement the resolution of the Fifth Party Congress.

Quang Ninh has chosen Ha Tu Coal Mine (Hon Gai Coal Corporation) and Le Loi Village (Hoanh Bo District) as the first units to launch this campaign before others because they are characteristic of two important production sectors in the province—that is, the industrial and agricultural ones. By adhering to the precept that debate should be held while stepping up the execution of all tasks and that knowledge should be materialized by revolutionary action, party members in these units have achieved a high degree of unanimity with the fundamental problems raised in the party congress documents, accurately assessed the actual situation, the objective and subjective causes and the good and bad points in each field of activity and have, at the same time, discussed measures aimed at overcoming weak aspects and voiced their determination to move forward to be worthy of being a nucleus in leading the masses to build and defend the socialist fatherland. Adequate preparations have been made to draw up a meeting schedule and to organize the reading and hearing of documents in accordance with the conditions and receptive standards of different categories of participants in the political activity campaign. The Provincial Party Committee has quickly disseminated the experiences drawn from Ha Tu Coal Mine and Le Loi Village and, on this basis, has directed the various echelons to lay stress on some noteworthy points in order to further clarify the close relationships between two strategic missions and to clearly understand the initial phase of the transitional period as well as the acuteness and complexity of the struggle between two roads.

Over 30,000 party members from nearly 700 basic party organizations in the province are participating eagerly in the political activity campaign. Many Meo highland villages in the districts of Hai Ninh, Quang Ha, Binh Lieu, Ba Che and Hoanh Bo have drawn up a plan to motivate tribesmen to unite to maintain their production areas firmly, to exploit land and labor potentials to produce plenty of grain and food and to stand ready to fight against the Chinese aggressors. Enterprises subordinate to the Hon Gai and Uong Bi Coal Corporation, Geologic Federation No 9 and Quang Ninh Port have formulated sound plans to achieve targets and fulfill the 1982 plan. Party organizations in various sectors such as forestry, maritime products, construction, transportation and communications, water conservancy and so on have also found suitable measures to improve working methods, to overcome negative practices, to promote the emulation movement and to materialize the Party Congress resolution.

PARTY MEMBERS' QUALIFICATIONS EXAMINED AFTER PARTY CARDS ISSUANCE

[Text] To prepare for a review of the issuance of party cards at the grassroots level concurrently with the conduct of a campaign of political activities, from the beginning of July to mid-August, the Hanoi Municipal Party Committee Standing Committee assigned a number of work teams composed of cadres from organizational, propaganda, training and control committees to cooperate with the precincts and four districts in examining the qualifications of party members in 42 basic party organizations following the issuance of party cards. This inspection phase was designed to classify party members in party chapters, to cite those having registered numerous achievements in carrying out tasks ever since they received party cards and also to examine unqualified party members and expel them from the party.

In the two precincts of Dong Da and Ba Dinh, the work teams have helped party committees at the grassroots level to adhere to criteria in classifying party members in party chapters subordinate to Tho Quan Ward, the Machine Tools Institute, the Bank's Printing Enterprise, the Sanitary Equipment Enterprise, the Level-I Pharmaceuticals Corporation, the Public Health Bureau, the Doi Can Ward, the Antituberculosis Institute, the Chien Thang Dressmaking Enterprise, the Construction Middle School and so on.

A practical examination based on public opinion and the set criteria has revealed that, of a total number of 383 party members in Dong Da Precinct whose cases have been examined, 42.6 percent have played an exemplary vanguard role and made great progress after receiving their party cards, that 31.9 percent have proven qualified but have only made limited achievements because of objective circumstances such as old age and bad health, that 20.6 percent have been afflicted with some shortcomings which are not serious, though, and that 21 persons have failed to fulfill party membership qualifications and represent 5.5 percent (of the total number of party members examined during the current stage). In Hai Ba Trung Precinct and Tu Liem District, the inspection conducted in more than 10 basic party organizations has revealed that many comrades are praiseworthy because they have made progress after receiving their party cards; at the same time, there are grounds for reaching a clear-cut conclusion that in some cases the time limit for postponed issuance of party cards has already expired and that a number of new party members had committed mistakes and are no longer qualified for party membership.
The inspection phase conducted in various precincts and districts has been carried out strictly, carefully and objectively and has had the effect of enhancing the discipline spirit among party chapters.

The Hanoi Municipal Party Committee Standing Committee has heard the report on the result of this inspection phase and has promptly disseminated experiences throughout the municipality with a view to guiding closely the task of reviewing the issuance of party cards from the grassroots level on up and coordinating it with the political activity campaign.

ECONOMIC-TECHNICAL COOPERATION BETWEEN HANOI, PROVINCES EXPANDED

Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 7 Sep 82 pp 1, 4

[Text] VNA--This year Hanoi has signed economic-technical cooperation contracts with 16 provinces and cities throughout the country. These provinces have begun to supply Hanoi with an amount of materials, raw materials and agricultural products valued at 28 million dong and including more than 1,000 tons of coal, 100-odd tons of scrap steel, 400-odd tons of sugar, 320 tons of powdered fish, sauce manufacture residue and synthetic feed for hog raising, 230 tons of soybeans and soybean cakes for the manufacture of foodstuffs and sauces, a certain amount of raw materials for paper manufacture and rattan and bamboo for the manufacture of export goods. Owing to such aid, Hanoi has been able to use part of its existing industrial and technical potentials and capacities, to provide employment for thousands of workers and handicraftsmen and to produce an additional amount of goods worth many million dong.

In the first stage, Hanoi has supplied to the provinces nearly 10 million dong worth of technical equipment and goods including 100 electric motors of various types, a number of machine tools, dozens of tons of basic chemicals and an amount of industrial products and goods worth many million dong. For the benefit of the economic and technical sectors in many provinces, Hanoi is designing and urgently manufacturing refrigerating equipment, complete sets of equipment for fruit juice producing installations, equipment with a yearly output of 150 tons for paper mills and various types of machines used in processing wood, extracting oils and loosening cotton. Hanoi is also sending technical cadres and skillful workers to certain localities to help them build production installations or export agricultural products and import staple commodities, supplies and raw materials to meet the requirements of production and life.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION IN NORTHERN PROVINCES DEVELOPED

Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 7 Sep 82 pp 1, 4

[Text] VNA—Agricultural cooperatives in North Vietnam have sown and transplanted the early 10th-month rice crop on about 170,000 hectares representing 21 percent of the total area of the 1982 10th-month crop and 60 percent of the total area of the 1981 early 10th-month crop.

Fully aware of the economic benefit to be derived from the winter agricultural season, all localities, cooperatives and their members have—with the positive aid of the electricity and water conservancy sectors—used all the existing means in an attempt to maintain the current areas for the early 10th-month crop and the winter crop and even to achieve the largest area possible.

To save seedlings, a number of cooperatives have transplanted the early 10th-month seedlings onto watered low-lying fields; whenever rain falls, they will transplant long-term seedlings onto the fields initially designed to receive the early 10th-month seedlings according to plan. This is one of the principal reasons why the early 10th-month rice has been grown only on a small area in a number of localities such as Hai Hung which has attained only 24 percent of the area norm, followed by Bac Thai with 21 percent, Ha Bac with 19 percent, Vinh Phu with 18.6 percent, Thanh Hoa with 17.5 percent, Thai Binh with 14 percent, Ha Son Binh with 12.8 percent, Ha Nam Ninh with 12.7 percent and Hai Phong with 9.1 percent. Since the area grown with the current early 10th-month rice crop is smaller than that grown with the previous one, the various localities and cooperatives will find it difficult to arrange a cultivation pattern and area for each type of crop during the 1982 winter agricultural season. In view of such a difficulty, many provinces and cities have already organized an inspection to reassess accurately the early 10th-month rice area in each region, district and cooperative, actively drawn up a winter production plan conforming to the specific conditions of the 1982 10th-month and winter agricultural seasons, adjusted the crop cultivation pattern while paying due attention to grain and food crops as well as crops yielding export products, and considered both the value and use value of winter crop products important. Since a low area norm has been attained for the early 10th-month rice, many localities are considering intensive cultivation of the winter crops to be the principal task and are trying to rapidly increase the productivity and volume of production of the winter crops—especially the yield of the grain and food producing crops.
The early 10th-month rice plants are budding and blooming so that this crop will be harvested in late September and early October in certain areas. The various localities are rearranging the labor force and preparing seeds, draft power and fertilizer in order to be able to till the soil and to grow corn and potatoes immediately after harvesting the early rice crop in each field.

As of 25 August, cooperatives and their members have grown sweet potatoe cuttings on more than 29,000 hectares—an increase of 1,000 hectares over the same period last year. From now to the planting period, if this area of sweet potatoe cuttings is not waterlogged and is tended carefully and if additional cuttings are grown consecutively, there will be enough cuttings to cultivate all the area allocated to the sweet potatoe crop according to the plan. Noteworthy is the fact that many localities such as Ha Bac, Thai Binh, Nghe Tinh and Binh Tri Thien have large areas suitable for sweet potatoe cultivation but have only grown less sweet potatoe cuttings than in the same period last year. Meanwhile, the provinces of Hai Hung, Thanh Hoa and Ha Nam Ninh and the city of Hanoi have grown more sweet potatoe cuttings than in the previous cultivation season.

Many localities are organizing a survey of all the crops to be cultivated in winter and are strenuously preparing a sufficient amount of seeds and cuttings to cultivate all the planned areas.

Tribesmen in the new economic zones in the mountainous region of Ha Son Binh Province have opened nearly 7,000 hectares of new land including terraced and leveled upland fields representing more than 50 percent of the zoned area. Most of this area has been cultivated with rice, subsidiary food and industrial crops.

Ha Son Binh Province has sent cadres to mountainous districts to help them survey and zone off lands and to guide the building of material-technical bases for the new economic zones. By investing over 3.5 million dong, performing thousands of man-days and fully using on-the-spot supplies and raw materials, people in the new economic zones have built 31 kms of rural communication roads, strengthened and built over 20 lakes and reservoirs, dug and embanked 26 km of level-1 and -2 canals and hundreds of small canals to irrigate every ordinary and terraced field which had just been reclaimed. An average of 500 dong has been invested in each hectare of newly reclaimed field in the economic zones. Tribesmen in the new economic zones in the districts of Mai Chau, Yen Thuy, Lac Thuy and Ky Son have opened 500 to 800 hectares of virgin land representing 70 percent of the zoned area. Beside opening new lands, production installations have strengthened the network of pig sties and cattle stables and farms with a view to increasing the amount of fertilizer to boost intensive cultivation in the newly reclaimed fields. To date, in the new economic zones in Ha Son Binh, there are many fields each with an area of 100 to 200 hectares which have been subjected to various developments such as the strengthening of banks, the building of terraced and leveled upland fields and of water conservancy works for irrigation and drainage, the processing of fertilizer and the implementation of the intensive cultivation method right at the outset. Many localities have shaped up specialized cultivation zones of 100 to 200 hectares. Almost all these zones have been able not only to produce enough grain and food for self-sufficiency purposes but also gradually to fulfill their grain obligation to the state.

Ha Son Binh is surveying and consolidating its production trend and is making further investments in 28 newly zoned areas with the aim of expanding the concentrated specialized cultivation areas belonging to the new economic zones in eight mountainous districts and also with the objective of helping these zones rapidly stabilize production and sell an increasing amount of agricultural products to the state.

GAINS AGRICULTURE OBTAINS FROM SOCIALIST TRANSFORMATION

[Article by Le Quang Thiet of Tien Giang Province: "Effects of Socialist Transformation on Agriculture in Tien Giang"]

[Text] Tien Giang is one of the nine key rice-growing provinces in the Mekong River delta and every year produces quite a large volume of grain that not only satisfies the needs of its cadres and people in their daily life but also properly fulfills its grain obligation to the state. However, it faces the problem of having too little land and too many people: it has 110,000 hectares of land for rice-growing, 32,000 hectares of garden land and the rest waste land totaling 40,000 hectares; with a population of 1.3 million, the per capita average land area is only 90 square meters. Since land does not grow and productivity increases more slowly than the population does, how can the province have enough to feed its people? After the liberation, Tien Giang realized that it should soon carry out the socialist transformation of agriculture in order both to change the system of ownership of the means of production and to reorganize and develop production, to reorganize and redistribute labor, to improve the standard of living and to raise social accumulation.

Back in 1978, after it had studied and learned both in the party and among the people the resolutions and directives of the party and government, Tien Giang promptly started the socialist transformation in agriculture. It built on a trial basis Tan Hoi and Phu Quoi Cooperatives (in Cai Lay and Go Cong Dong Districts, respectively); later, throughout the province there appeared 70 additional cooperatives and 164 other production collectives accounting for 18.2 percent of the cultivated land, with 19 percent of the farmer households entering collective production. Cho Gao District and My Tho City led the movement for building cooperatives and production collectives and brought almost all of their land and farmer households into collective production. In addition to the existing cooperatives and production collectives, in 2 years 1978 and 1979, Tien Giang encouraged farmers to set up more than 3,000 production solidarity teams in 717 hamlets as a form of training for farmers and cadres. While the movement was growing, it was struck by successive natural calamities. It concentrated its energy on organizing relief activities, supply of foods, investment and loans to assist the cooperatives and production collectives, or adopting positive policies and measures, such as leasing land on a temporary basis for production, to uphold the movement. But because of the overall changes, by August 1980 there remained only 12 cooperatives and 68 production collectives, with only 4 cooperatives among them and more than one-third of the collectives doing good business. The rest of them was weak and had to undergo many rounds of consolidation and improvement of quality in order to stay alive.

After having reviewed and evaluated the situation, the leaders of the province unanimously agreed that in the process of switching from wartime leadership to leadership and management of the economy, the cadres of the province showed a lack of experience and a sense of reality and their work was too new. On the other hand, the province itself had not prepared really well the conditions that would be necessary for the cooperatives and production collectives to survive after they were set up. The common mistake at that time was being too simplistic, subjective and hasty, working many projects at the same time and running after quantity, without correctly applying the principles of cooperation; a number of cadres being corrupt, with declining qualities, etc. That situation made a number of cooperatives and production collectives fail to obtain good economic results and lowered their productivity and the values of their members' working days. Therefrom the confidence of cadres, party members and farmers in taking the road to collective production was seriously diminished.

On the basis of that experience, from August 1980 to October 1981, the Tien Giang Provincial VCP Committee adopted the policy of firmly consolidating and improving the quality of production solidarity teams while, as an integral part of this job, consolidating hamlet planning and production committees. At the same time, it concentrated its energy on consolidating and maintaining the existing cooperatives and collectives on the basis of resolving any doubts, overcoming any negative phenomena, using the "3 contracts" system combined with reward and punishment as the main interest and carrying out the "5 opennesses," with 15 unified financial items, in order to get involved in the management of collectives and cooperatives.

At that time, the VCP Central Committee Secretariat issued Directive No 100 on signing product contracts with labor groups and laborers. Due to their difficulties many districts, villages and cooperatives directly suggested that their units seek improvement through the new contracting system. Under the direct leadership of the Provincial VCP Standing Committee, the province's People's Committee and Agricultural Transformation Committee studied, prepared conditions and grasped the purpose and principle of Directive No 100 as it was applied to the actual situation of the province under the condition of both carrying on the socialist transformation and reorganizing agricultural production in a serious and strict manner. The Provincial VCP Standing Committee and People's Committee permitted the Agricultural Transformation Committee to assume leadership over doing experimental work in two different forms: one, to improve the manner of contracting in regard to the old cooperatives and production collectives; two, to link signing end-product contracts with laborers with the process of mobilizing farmers for taking the road to collective production. Experience was to be drawn from that work so that when the Central Committee allowed it to be applied to the southern provinces, it could be developed and carried out on a wider scope. The results showed that the application of the new contracting system in accordance with the party Central Committee Secretariat's Directive No 100 truly created favorable conditions for resolving the confusion and doubts in the old cooperatives and production collectives and at the same time making it easier to encourage farmers to enthusiastically join the collectives and to be attached to the end-product contracts with laborers from the beginning. An example: Ninh Binh Cooperative (Cho Gao District) had adopted the "3 contracts" system combined with reward and punishment, which was an improvement over the previous working-day contracting system, but in the 1979-1980 winter-spring season only 14 out of 440 households accepted the contracts and in the summer-autumn season, still only 60 households accepted them. But in the 1981-1982 winter-spring season, when the cooperatives changed the "3 contracts" system to signing product contracts with labor groups and laborers, 100 percent of the households accepted the contracts. And within one production season their volume of production was obviously increased. A comparison showed that when the new contracting system was applied, the average rice yield as obtained by the cooperatives in all of their cultivated areas rose from 1.7 to 2.8 tons per hectare. In the second season it rose to 3.6 tons. The total volume of production was only 703 tons in 1979 but rose to nearly 990 tons in 1981. The average income of a laborer was 696 kilograms of paddy in 1979 and rose to 913 kilograms in early 1981. In addition to signing product contracts for the rice crop, Ninh Binh Cooperative gradually applied the contracting system to subsidiary food crops and animal raising; as a result, the overall income of cooperative members and collectives was obviously increased. An example: in 1979 the cooperative planted only 6.7 hectares of tomato and .8 hectare of soybean and had an income of 36,714 dong, but in 1981, by gradually applying the product contracting system to subsidiary food crops, it raised the tomato-growing area to 17.16 hectares, with an yield of 10 tons/hectare obtained, and the soybean-growing area to over 1 hectare, with an yield of 800 kilograms/hectare obtained and a total sum collected amounting to 105,866 dong. In collective animal raising, the cooperative had 41 draft animals and 1,670 ducks in 1979 but as many as 68 draft animals and 8,800 ducks in 1981. The herd of meat hogs, which did not exist before, totaled 96 in 1981. In animal raising by cooperative members, there were 145 draft animals, 5,982 chickens and ducks and 287 meat hogs in 1979, but those figures were raised to 280 draft animals, 6,640 chickens and ducks and 458 meat hogs in 1981.
By adopting the product contracting system, Ninh Binh Cooperative was able to fulfill its grain obligation, to pay debts, as well as to build many remarkable welfare projects and material and technical bases. There existed a true solidarity among all, from the unit-managing cadres to cooperative members. Every job was discussed in a democratic way. The capacity of cadres, the sense of responsibility, as well as the concept of disciplinary organization were all raised to a higher level. While carrying out improvement of the end-product contracting with labor groups and laborers in the old cooperatives and production collectives, on the basis of the initial success of Ninh Binh Cooperative in Cho Gao District, the Agricultural Transformation Committee of Tien Giang studied the very substance of Directive No 100 as it was closely linked with implementing Directives Nos 93 and 57 of the Political Bureau, for the purpose of reorganizing production in accordance with the "positive and sound" formula in the building of new production collectives. On the basis of the policy of the Provincial VCP Standing Committee, the Provincial Agricultural Transformation Committee, along with the standing committees of Cai Be and Go Cong Dong Districts, discussed and combined their opinion about selecting a good hamlet in their district to experiment the building of collectives in the 1981 summer-autumn season. Cai Be District was the place where the movement had remained "blank" in terms of organizing cooperatives; Go Cong Dong District had had 14 collectives, but none had been active before being "dissolved" at the time of changes.

Cai Be selected My Hoa Hamlet, solidarity unit No 4, Hoi Cu Village and Go Cong Dong selected Viet Hung Hamlet, solidarity unit No 5, Binh Nghi Village to carry on the movement to build new production collectives being attached from the very beginning to applying the product contracting system to labor groups and laborers. Naturally, as they were selected to experiment the building of collectives, these localities had to satisfy all four standards: having revolutionary traditions, fertile land, available watering convenience and a location permitting extending influence in a large area.

To assist the districts, the province organized the training of managerial and professional cadres for the collectives in an urgent and continual basis. In addition, it sent many experienced and capable cadres to districts and villages to assist them in drafting economic and technical, production and contracting plans and in conducting distribution, basic investigation, etc. so that, through these activities, they could help the collectives to determine the direction for their production and production plans, to distribute products, to set norms, to draw up technical programs, to handle land, labor and materials management, to classify ricefields, to select units being given contracts and accepting them, etc. The province's leaders realized that determination alone would not be sufficient and that there must be cadres who could directly work with and help villages and collectives to get prepared in every way and farmers who could discuss and decide in a democratic manner. However, the work the province was then doing was still considered experimental. But after Circular No 138 of the party Central Committee Secretariat was issued to permit the southern provinces to improve contracting work and to attach the end product to labor groups and laborers in the process of promoting cooperative work, the movement to build production collectives in Tien Giang was really making obvious changes.

Following the agricultural transformation conference convened by the Provincial VCP Committee in February 1982, the province widely launched a drive to carry out the secretariat's Directive No 100. Its districts and municipality simultaneously improved the contracting method in order to build new production collectives. As a result, by the end of May 1982, i.e., in only 4 months in which the directive was implemented, it built 311 new collectives. Including the old cooperatives and collectives, as of now it has 427 production collectives and 19 cooperatives. The leading districts are Go Cong Tay having 144 collectives, Go Cong Dong 83 and Cho Gao 80, followed by Cai Be 60, Cai Lay 34 and Chau Thanh 17 and My Tho City 9. Of its 141 villages 74 have built their own collectives. Four villages among them -- Hoa Tinh (Cho Gao District), Binh Nhi and the town of Vinh Binh (Go Cong Tay District) and Tan My Chanh (My Tho Municipality) -- have completed the work of building cooperatives; and 30 hamlets have completed the work of building production collectives. The number of farmer households having gone into collective production increased from 14,729 in February 1982 to 23,379 in May 1982, with the total rice-growing area being 8,318 hectares, or a percentage of 8.05 percent.

With the positive effects of Directive No 100 of the party Central Committee Secretariat combined with their own resolute struggle and spirit of overcoming difficulties and being self-sufficient and self-strengthening, the party organization and people of Tien Giang have scored great achievements and made new changes in connection with building cooperatives and carrying on the socialist transformation in agriculture. All localities in the province have established their production collectives. Many of the latter have been doing well in both production and business, obtaining good economic results and stabilizing and improving in a remarkable way the standard of living.

On the basis of signing end-product contracts with labor groups and laborers in the process of encouraging and building new production collectives, and relying on the norms set by individual districts and municipality, in 1982 Tien Giang Province is determined to build anew and to have 971 collectives, including the old ones. Every village and hamlet has to have a collective. Thus 26,000 hectares out of the province's 117,512 hectares of rice-growing land will have been collectivized, and on this basis, the province will in 1983 have the ability to basically complete the socialist transformation of 30-45 villages and 2-3 district and municipal units and to have 75-85 percent of the farmer households and land going into collective production.

HAI HUNG COLLECTS PADDY FROM USERS OF IRRIGATION SYSTEM

[Article by Bui Ngoc Lien, Ministry of Water Conservancy: "Hai Hung Collects Water Conservancy Fee"]

[Text] Hai Hung Province has the Bac Hung Hai irrigation system, large sluices at Cau Xe and An Tho, 320 electric pump stations with 1,750 pumps of all kinds, a total assembly-installation output of 67,000 kilowatts, 700 kilometers of transmission lines, etc. It pays attention to managing and exploiting the irrigation systems that serve production and everyday life, ensures the planting of 12,000 hectares of rice in each season every year and develops the winter season to cover about from 45,000 to 50,000 hectares; the yields of rice and other crops have been increasing.

But a great difficulty in the past years was the fact that collection was not enough to cover spending because of the water conservancy fees collected being too low. The management of irrigation was still heavily administrative. As the irrigation works have been in operation for quite a while, they now need repairs, maintenance care and major repairs; in addition, the cost of electricity has increased 10 times. Consequently, there was not enough money to spend to strengthen management and exploitation of the irrigation systems and to run them regularly and effectively.

While waiting for the Council of Ministers to issue new water conservancy fee regulations, to overcome the above-mentioned difficulty, in May 1982 the Provincial People's Committee adopted the new water conservancy fee levels as follows: for a system of watering and drainage by means of electric pumps, the collection is 270 kilograms of paddy per hectare per year; watering by means of electric pumps, 160 kilograms; drainage by means of electric pumps, 108 kilograms; subsidiary food crops and industrial crops in winter season, 80 kilograms. At such levels, if all of the needs for watering and drainage to serve production were satisfied and if no crop losses were involved, in a year of normal weather Hai Hung could collect about 22,660 tons of paddy (at the price of 2.5 dong a kilogram, the money collected would be 56,650,000 dong). Although the collection levels were raised, the province calculated only the capital depreciation of machinery and equipment and has not yet calculated the capital depreciation of the entire system of irrigation works, nor the major repairs for the system. In a year of normal weather, the province would still pay an additional sum of about 6 million dong; in a year of unfavorable weather, about 10 million dong.

In the 1981-1982 fifth-month and spring season, many cooperatives and districts began actively collecting water conservancy fees at the new levels and included them in the grain obligation to be collected. The cooperatives in Cam Binh District have paid 1,200 tons (the goal as set in the 1982 plan is 2,100 tons).

THREE NORTHERN PROVINCES FIGHT FLOOD TO SAVE RICE CROP

[VNA News Release: "Thanh Hoa, Ha Nam Ninh and Ha Bac Fight Flood To Save the Tenth-Month Rice Crop"]

[Text] Typhoon No 5 brought heavy rains to the delta and coastal districts of Thanh Hoa Province and flood to 19,000 hectares of tenth-month rice, including 3,500 hectares in Nong Cong District and 2,100 hectares in Hoang Hoa District. Right when the rains began, Quang Xuong, Dong Son, Hoang Hoa and Ha Trung Districts removed the barriers on drainage canals and cleared all ditches in the fields to allow water to flow away quickly. Along with operating the self-regulating drainage pipes to carry away flood water, Nong Cong, Trung Son, Tho Xuan, Dong Thieu, Trieu Son, Hoang Hoa Districts and Thanh Hoa City completed the installation of 162 pumps and quickly moved the pump stations that would be needed to readily fight the flood. The province also completed the assembly and installation of a number of large sluices and pump stations which were ready in time for the flood. The provincial military command, in coordination with other sectors, developed a plan for protection of the key flood control works and for readily coping with any bad developments.

More than 2,000 hectares of rice crop in Ha Nam Ninh Province have been flooded because of the effects of Typhoon No 5 and the continual rains since 2 September. Tam Diep, Kim Bang and Gia Vien Districts have from 1,300 to 4,000 hectares of rice affected by the flood. The province supplied on a priority basis the flood-fighting districts with nearly 10,000 kilowatts of electricity and 320 tons of oil. The pump stations of Co Dam and Nhu Trac divided their workers into 3 day shifts to drain water from the flooded areas; the districts mobilized 200 additional electric pumps and hundreds of hydraulic pumps and had on a regular basis more than 30,000 buckets and waterwheels, which drained the water in time to save more than 7,000 hectares of flooded rice crop.
The many days of rains in September covered more than 10,000 hectares of tenth-month rice in Ha Bac Province with water and seriously flooded 2,500 hectares. The water conservancy sector, in coordination with the electric power service and districts, supplied on a priority basis the large pump stations like Kim Doi, Trinh Xa, Hien Luong, Ngoc Quan and Kenh Vang with electricity so that they could drain water from the seriously flooded areas and at the same time urges all cooperative members to use every available means to remove water from the ricefields. Que Vo District, which had more than 1,000 hectares of the rice crop covered with water, urgently tried to protect its dikes and embankments while dividing its manpower into 3 flood-fighting groups using manual means. In the last week of August alone, Ha Bac saved 2,500 hectares of ricefields from serious flood and provided leadership for the cooperatives to actively care for the rice plants which had just been saved from the flood. Gia Luong, Yen Phong, Yen Dung and Lang Giang transplanted rice seedlings once again in part of the area where the rice crop had been a total loss. Yen Phong District alone mobilized its cooperative members for pulling rice plants from the low ricefields, temporarily transplanting them in high ricefields and transplanting them for good after the water receded. Quang Thinh Village (Lang Giang District) used the temporarily-transplanted rice plants from the high ricefields and the reserve seedlings to transplant in more than 5 hectares.

At the present time, Ha Bac is providing its districts and cities with leadership as they actively control and fight the flood, care for the rice plants that have just been saved from the flood and quickly switch part of the long-flooded rice crop-growing area to accommodating subsidiary food crops.

CONSTRUCTION STEPPED UP AT USSR-AIDED POWERPLANT

OW051812 Hanoi VNA in English 1512 GMT 5 Oct 82

[Text] Hanoi, 5 Oct (VNA)--Vietnamese workers and engineers and Soviet specialists have achieved 85.2 percent of the 1982 construction plan at the Hao Binh hydro-power project on the Da River, one of the highest building tempos recorded by the building service of the whole country so far.

The Hao Binh hydro-power plant, built with Soviet assistance with a designed capacity of 1.92 million kilowatts, will be the biggest of its kind in Vietnam and one of the biggest in Southeast Asia.

Since early this year, Vietnamese workers in close coordination with Soviet experts have introduced many technical innovations in construction work with a view to the blocking of the Da River by the end of this year as instructed by the chairman of the Council of Ministers. They have moved more than 1.7 million cubic metres of earth and stone in the right bank, laid 6,000 cubic metres of concrete in the building of the discharge canal, dredged almost 100,000 cubic metres of earth from the bed of the main river, and laid more than 1.2 million cubic meters of earth and gravel for the building of the base of the future dam.

On the left bank, four tunnels are under intensive construction. About 16,000 cubic metres of earth and stone have been moved to dig 360 metres of tunnel.

Seven ancillary projects were completed in September. They were a 400-tonne explosive storage, a concrete conveyor belt, an oxygen station, an engineering workshop, the second phase of the vehicle repair shop which can repair 500 trucks a year, a truck-washing yard, and a battery charging station.

Other support projects have been commissioned ahead of schedule, including a rest and recreation centre, a boiler, a refrigerating house, three residential and office blocks for exports, and more than 10,000 square metres of living quarters and public utilities.

At a ceremony held on October 4 at the construction site, Vietnamese workers and Soviet experts launched an emulation campaign in honour of the 65th anniversary of the Russian October Revolution and the 60th founding anniversary of the USSR.

The contract calls for the moving of 675,000 more cubic metres of earth and stone from the right bank of the river, the blasting of rocks on the left bank where the dam will be built and the building of more roads in service of the construction of the dam.

BUILDING MATERIALS PRODUCTION--Hanoi, 12 Oct (VNA)--In the last 9 months, the output of the main building materials such as cement, bricks, tiles, construction glass produced by the state-run enterprises has increased by 15 percent over the same period last year. Cement output, in particular, increased by nearly 20 percent. The increased production of building materials has helped the building projects to meet their schedules. Among these projects are the Vinh Phu paper plant built with Swedish assistance and the Soviet-equipped Pha Lai Thermo-electric Power Plant, the two biggest of their kinds in Vietnam to date. MINERAL PROSPECTING--Hanoi, 7 Oct (VNA)--The geological service has achieved 70 percent of its annual program for the exploration and prospection for subsoil resources. It has achieved 92 percent of the annual program for the drawing of 1/200,000-scale geological maps, and fulfilled the programs for hydrological geology and project geology maps. Priority has been given to the exploration and prospection for bituminous and non-bituminous coal, pyrite, kaolin and phosphorite. The exploration of subterranean water has been completed in many places where new economic zones will be built. In the prospection for bituminous coal at Lang Cam in the northern border province of Hoang Lien Son, the survey teams have found a bigger reserve than previously estimated. SMALL INDUSTRIES, HANDICRAFTS DEVELOPMENT

[Text] Hanoi, 10 Oct (VNA)--In the past five years, the small industries and handicrafts have produced 76 percent of the total of consumer goods in the country.

In 1981, small industries and handicrafts output was valued at 3,780 million dong, 11 percent more than planned and nearly 200 per cent more than the 1976 output. In Ho Chi Minh City alone, the output value increased from 191 million dong in 1976 to 1,400 million in 1981.

Thirteen provinces and cities have achieved output values exceeding the 100 million dong mark and 60 districts and towns, the 10 million dong mark.

Small industries and handicrafts account for 67 per cent of the output value of local industries and 44.5 per cent of the national industries. Export items represent 25 percent of the total exports, up by 8 per cent compared with 1977.

In recent months, the small industry and handicraft workshops have actively made use of local raw materials and produced new kinds of goods to meet the demands of the market. In the past three years, another 1,000 items have been added to the production lines, including food processing, machines, farm tools, household utensils, bicycles parts, surgery gloves.

Many areas of production specialisation have been formed. Thai Binh, Ha Nam Ninh and Thanh Hoa provinces have set up specialized areas for sleeping mat, rush, carpet and textile production. Hanoi and Haiphong have developed such crafts as carpet weaving, canvas shoe making and manufacture of bicycle parts and metal consumer goods. In the south companies for production and export of small industry and handicraft goods have been set up in Ho Chi Minh City and the Mekong River Delta. Exchange or cooperation in the exploitation of raw materials has been effected at the cooperative level. As a result, in 1981, the small industry and handicraft service has procured for itself 80 percent of raw materials and reduced by 10 per cent the import of raw materials. Export value has exceeded 400 million dong.

The service is aiming at the target of 5.2 billion dong in output value by 1985, nearly double the 1981 figure. It also plans to provide jobs for more than 100,000 persons a year, bring the total workforce to 2,000,000, and better serve agriculture, domestic consumption and export.

TRIBAL LANGUAGES TEACHING—For the coming 1982-83 academic year, Gia Lai-Kon Tum has decided to introduce the teaching of two languages—Gia Rai and Ba Na—into the curriculum of basic-level general schools in the Gia Rai and Ba Na ethnic minority areas. MEETING REVIEWS ACHIEVEMENTS, EXPERIENCE IN 1979 CENSUS

[Article: "Final Review of Census"]

[Text] The Central Census Guidance Committee has just met with the representatives of the people's committees and census guidance committees of 40 provinces and municipalities to review the 1979 census.

The conference highly evaluated the success of the census and the job of putting together the census data. The representatives pointed to many precious experiences in organizing guidance and combining the data gathered in the country as a whole and in different localities. The final report says the 1979 census showed a population of 52,741,000. The people under 15 years of age accounted for 42.55 percent. The average life expectancy of the people, as projected in 1979, is 66 years -- 63.6 years for men and 67.8 years for women. The cultural capacity of the people has improved quickly. Illiteracy has been basically wiped out. The country as a whole had 11.8 million general-school students and 365,000 vocational-school students and apprentices. The number of science and technology cadres of middle-school and higher background and technical workers has increased at a rather high rate at recent times.

Although the rate of population increase has dropped, it remains at a high level. In 1979 the birth rate was 33 per thousand of population. According to an estimate of the population increase in the coming years based on an effort to quickly reduce the rate of population increase to a rational level of about ten-thousandths, the population will be from 73 to 75 million by the year 2000. The conference recommended projects in connection with the motion to improve and strengthen family planning according to the state plan as steps to be taken toward stabilizing the population and using the increased manpower in the coming years for economic development.
The 1979 census, which was successful, reflects the effective centralized leadership and scientific organization of the state at different levels and the enthusiastic response of the people, with some material assistance from UNFPA. The census data are helping the party and state organs to use as a basis for studying plans for the development of economy, culture, social management and defense of the socialist fatherland. They are being printed for wide circulation.

The Council of State and Council of Ministers congratulate and commend 71 outstanding units and cadres and award Labor Orders to 16 provincial, municipal, district and ward units. Hai Hung Province is awarded Labor Order First Class; Ha Nam Ninh and Quang Ninh, Labor Orders Second Class.
